2. These two men are brothers. They were admitted to the Workhouse on the 30th January 1890. The former is an Electrical Engineer by profession and the latter a Stationer and General Salesman. They came to Ceylon in 1887 and in Colombo they started a place of business under the name of "Denvers and Co., General Merchants and Importers." Having failed in business they remained in Colombo for about 4 months in search of employment and being unsuccessful they,

There being no prospect of employment for them here, they desire to be deported to Natal near which place the younger brother owns a piece of land and where they have relations and friends who will assist them. James Denvers has not been in good health since his arrival in Madras and is quite unfit to remain in the country especially during the hot weather. An opportunity now offers for their passage by the Emigrant vessel, the S. S. "Untata" leaving about the middle of this month.

when he was taken before the 4th Judge of the signed filed an Affidavit setting forth his circumstances and offering to pay an instalment debt; but owing perhaps to press of work at unfortunately not attended to, and he was

Forth George, S. MacLellan Holdeen Khan 3rd February 1890 Clerk, Govt. Mil. Secretariat.

Memorandum

As directed in Office Order dated January 1890, the undersigned begs to submit the following explanation regarding the unavoidable circumstances under which he became involved in debts:-

2. In October 1876, the undersigned was taken ill and was granted a month's privilege leave. As he became perfectly bed ridden on the expiration of this leave, he applied for 2 months' extension, to which he was eligible, but instead of privilege leave, sick leave on half pay (Rs 25) was granted him, and his month's privilege leave ^{was} also commuted to sick leave. This unforeseen circumstance forced him to run into debt.

3. Just at this critical juncture, the calamities and distresses of the Famine of 1876/77 began their ravages, and prices of all common necessities of life were to a fearful extent. The staple article of food (rice) being sold at 4 measures the Rupee. His relatives in the Mofussil hearing of the severity of his illness, poured in one after the other to the number of 11 to see him. The additional expenses on their account, together with those of his own family, which then consisted of 13 souls, plunged him deeper into debt. Having had also to meet a heavy item on account of his Doctor's Bills, his debts at this time amounted to about Rs 400.

4. On his joining office, he was further mulcted in the sum of Rs 10 which was deducted from his pay by equal instalments for 2 months, as a charge incurred for having obtained the services of a clerk to write the Hindustani portion in a volume

Officers' Commission, 1888

5. During his illness, both his step-mother and Aunt, who lived with him, took ill. Their lingering sickness and their subsequent deaths and consequent expenses on account of funeral and death ceremonies, &c., added to the cost of re-erecting the compound walls and a portion of his house, which repeatedly fallen down during the rains in 1877, involved him still further into debts which then amounted to Rs 1200.

6. On the date of his transfer to the pension establishment on 31st March 1887, however, the total amount of his debts was reduced to Rs 700. He then entered into a Trust with all but one of his creditors by paying Rs 30 for the first month and by settling to pay Rs 23 as instalments for subsequent months. He had also to pay an instalment of Rs 5 separately to the creditor who would not sign the Trust Deed. Thus the undersigned had to pay Rs 28 monthly towards his debts, which amount together with Income Tax, &c., quite exhausted his salary, and only left him his bare pension of Rs 30 to live upon with his large family consisting 15 souls. As there was every probability of his getting involved afresh on account of heavy instalment, he prevailed upon his creditors and got the instalment reduced to Rs 20 which he tried to keep up pretty regularly till November 1889, in which month his debts were reduced to Rs 270.

7. Expecting to get an advance of pay before the Christmas holidays, as was given in December 1888, the undersigned arranged with the Agent of his Trust to pay him the usual instalment on receipt of the advance; but unfortunately this concession not being granted, he failed to pay the instalment in December last, when, one of his creditors being perhaps impatient, obtained a warrant for Rs 32 and arrested him with-out previously giving him a Notice as a Government servant - the amount being above Rs 20.

8. The creditor then demanded of the undersigned either payment of the amount in full, or Rs 15 in ready cash and a Pro. Note for Rs 30. The undersigned at first refused to agree to this arrangement; but, on a second consideration proposed to pay Rs 10 in hand and to execute a Pro. Note for Rs 30 as desired by the creditor. To this the creditor consented but urged that the Pro. Note should be countersigned by any one of the employees of the Military Secretariat. This being against the rules of the office, the undersigned tried his utmost to convince the creditor that it was utterly impossible ^{to comply} with his request, but he insisted upon the undersigned getting such joint signature and would not have that of anyone else. Hence the undersigned became perfectly helpless and had no alternative left but to surrender himself to the custody of the Bailiff.

9. As the Courts were then closed for the holidays, the undersigned was detained in the 'dors' jail till the re-opening thereof, when he was taken before the 4th Judge of the Small Cause Court, in whose Court the undersigned filed an Affidavit setting forth his circumstances and offering to pay an instalment of Rs 2 separately into the Court towards this debt; but owing perhaps to press of work at the Court on that day, his Affidavit was unfortunately ~~not~~ attended to, and he was ~~very~~ committed to the Civil Jail without being asked a single word in the face of his having put in the Affidavit
