Note.

The printed form is of same age - apart from its causing only case by case it goes farther than the law allows. Officers appointed under clause (a) can institute prosecutions under certain sections (one of which [§ 92] relates to Calcutta) & those appointed under clause (d) under another section. But they can't institute "prosecutions under the said act" - i.e. all prosecutions. The omission in the form of any reference to clause (d) of § 90 seems to be accidental.

The present order which appears to be perfectly legal will help to decrease correspondence and save a step to our app^{ts}. The powers upon every occasion. There is a change of these powers in a district.
