done, and threw up the appointment whenever they found it convenient to do so. Moreover, few of them could write a legible English and Canarese hand which is a sine qua non in my office
as the writing has to be deciphered by the printers.

Under these circumstances I request that no exception may be taken to the appointment I have made.

Canarese Translator's Office

13th September 1890

From M.R.R. S. Mangesh Rao Esq.
Canarese Translator to Government,

To

The Chief Secretary to Govt.
Stamhousehill.

Sir,

I have the honour to inform you that as a writer's post of Rs 15 fell vacant lately in my office and as I found it difficult to secure the services of a duly qualified candidate whose vernacular is Canarese I have temporarily appointed to it one B. Rama Rao by name, a matriculate who writes a very neat English and Canarese hand and is well qualified in other respects also, but who happens to be a somewhat distant relation of mine. As there are few Canarese knowing natives of Madras, whenever the post fell temporarily vacant on former occasions I had been obliged to appoint young men ~~who~~ from South Canara who happened to be here for purposes of studying law, but I invariably found that these took very little interest in the work, and looked upon their pay rather as a scholarship than as remuneration for work done
