The Chief Secretary to Government
Fort St. George.

Honourable Sir,

I regret to have again to trouble Government with reference to my letter of date 22nd August 1889, to the Public, but the despondency to which I have been reduced by the failure which has hitherto attended my endeavours to obtain some suitable employment drives me to seek the interception of Government once more. When persons are thrown out of service, Government is kind enough to circulate their names to the several Heads of Departments, and though, in doing so an express direction is not given, that these persons should be given a preference whenever vacancies occur, there can be no doubt as to the benevolent intentions of Government. But these intentions are, your petitioner regrets to say, rarely if ever, given effect to as no Head of the Department thinks he is bound to provide for the unfortunate individual, who is therefore, in the same position as if the Government had not done anything for him. I, therefore, venture to request
