FOR ORDERS.

The accompanying papers have raised the question of the necessity for a report of the transfer of charge of an office being made to Government. The practice in the present case, where stationery has been wasted owing to intimation of the fact having been made by letter and not by means of the ordinary "Certificate of Transfer of charge" form is of course irregular, but it is thought that the submission of the certificate of Transfer to Govt. is unnecessary. It is necessary that the Accl. Genl. should receive the certificate, but the copies sent to Govt. have been found in 99 cases out of 100 to be absolutely useless, being merely registered and "lodged". The date on which an officer hands over or receives charge of an office can always, in the very rare cases where such information is required, be readily and easily ascertained from the A. G's office with which the Secy. is in telephonic communication. The discontinuance of the practice would avoid the unnecessary labour involved in the filling up of the forms. The main offices are held by the same officer; one
