Madura DW^g No 275. d/25 May 1892. —

In continuation of this office No 228 d/20 May 1892, I beg to inform you that I inspected the Kovilpatty Temple this morning and found a great many shrubs growing on its roof and several Peepal trees growing in the joint of the face walls on the sides, the cost of removing which would be Rs 2. A few stones in the top three courses at the North eastern Corner are being thrust out of position, but as there is nothing of any architectural value involved and the stones will probably remain in their present position for several years to come, no action is necessary in this connection.

The front portion of the building, with Carvings as well as the interior Carvings which are of architectural value are in good order.

This temple has been abandoned for a long time and is now used as a halting place for travellers, it is very leaky, but I do not think that it is intended to stop leaks and maintain it in a fit state for travellers to lodge in, from the funds set apart for the conservation of Ancient Monuments.
