Measles.

Communicating to the Municipal Commissioners of Madras the report of the Surgeon-General with Government regarding the prevalence of — in Madras.

3rd District.—Measles prevailed in this district, but not to any serious extent; not one case was seen by the medical officer and but 6 by the district apothecary, all of which recovered.

4th District.—Six in and 5 out patients suffering from measles applied for relief at the Royapettah hospital; but neither the medical officer, Dr. Mohideen Sheriff, nor any of the subordinates, had seen or heard of a fatal case in the district. The disease, however, was prevalent in Royapettah, Triplicane, Mylapore, and St. Thomé, and such deaths as may have occurred are believed by Dr. Hazlett to have been due "to bad nursing of the patients, i.e., allowing them to become chilled."

2. From a review of the facts brought to my notice, the epidemic appears to have been prevalent more or less all over Madras, but most so, and also most fatal, in Black Town. In this country under favourable circumstances, measles as a rule runs a very mild course, but is very fatal in over-crowded localities, especially when due attention is not paid to the nursing of the sick, and when they are placed amongst insanitary surroundings. The simple disease is rarely fatal, death usually resulting from diarrhœa, or pneumonia induced by a chill or foul air or both combined.

3. But very few cases were brought to hospital for treatment, as the native population do not realise the risks attending the ailment when cases are exposed to unfavorable conditions such as those mentioned.

4. The most common sources of infection are schools, but in this epidemic the disease does not appear to have been at all prevalent amongst the classes of children attending these.

5. The epidemic appears to be still prevailing, and, considering the crowded condition and insanitary condition of the poorer quarters of Madras, I do not know of any immediate means likely to reduce the prevalence of the disease or its mortality. It would be easy to erect leaf or grass sheds for the reception of the sick, but I doubt if they would be brought for treatment to these temporary hospitals. The isolation of those suffering is the only known means of stamping out the disease, but such a measure would, I fear, be impracticable in the present state of public opinion. The great mortality usually resulting from small-pox and measles in Madras is due largely to over-crowding and filth, and till these unfavorable conditions are removed, such outbreaks will always display exceptional virulence, especially as regards children and young people.

MEMORANDUM.

Forwarded to the Chief Secretary to Government, Public Department.

2. As 65 deaths are a very large mortality in one week from measles in this country, I have asked the President of the Municipality to let me know the quarters of the city in which the disease is prevailing, so that special inquiries may be made as to the nature of the ailment and whether or not mistakes have not been made in registration.

OOTACAMUND,

(Signed) G. BIDIE, M.B., C.I.E.,
Surgeon-General with the Govt. of Madras.

From G. BIDIE, Esq., M.B., C.I.E., Surgeon-General with the Government of Madras, to the Chief Secretary to Government, dated Ootacamund, 21st May 1889, No. 193-O.

In compliance with reference on C. No. 1158, of 18th April 1889, I have the honor to submit the following remarks on the prevalence of measles in the city of Madras. The information has been got from the District Surgeons :—

1*st District.*—Since the 1st January, there have been but eight admissions into hospital for measles, and all recovered. A house-to-house visitation was made by Dr. Cook, and he found that the disease is very prevalent in the district, as many as seven children in one house being down with it. The epidemic is chiefly prevalent and fatal amongst the poor classes in crowded, dirty localities. From letters received from the heads of all the schools and colleges in the district, measles does not appear to be common amongst well-to-do-people, as comparatively few of the children attending these institutions were attacked and there were no deaths reported, amongst school-children. The deaths have been due, not to the primary disease, but to such sequelæ as pneumonia and diarrhœa, brought on by exposure to chills and by insanitary surroundings. In the period from the 23rd March to the 19th April, there were 171 deaths recorded in this district, of which 6 were amongst Brahmins, 113 amongst other Hindus, 16 amongst Muhammadans, 30 amongst Pariahs, 4 amongst Native Christians, and 2 amongst East Indians.

2*nd District.*—The disease was less prevalent in this district, and the total number of fatal cases reported between the end of January and end of April amounted to 62. All the schools and colleges, as well as the two cotton mills and the Gun Carriage Factory in the district, were quite free from measles. The mortality occurred chiefly amongst the poor.

of Madras. I do not know of any immediate means likely to reduce the prevalence of the disease or its mortality. It would be easy to erect leaf or grass sheds for the reception of the sick, but I doubt if they would be brought for treatment to these temporary hospitals. The isolation of those suffering is the only known means of stamping out the disease, but such a measure would I fear be impracticable in the present state of public opinion. The great mortality usually resulting from small pox and measles in Madras is due largely to overcrowding and filth, and till these unfavourable conditions are removed such outbreaks will always display exceptional virulence especially as regards children and young people.

2. From a review of the facts brought to my notice the epidemic appears to have been prevalent more or less all over Madras, but most so and also most fatal in Black Town. In this county under favourable circumstances measles as a rule runs a very mild course; but is very fatal in over crowded localities, especially where due attention is not paid to the nursing of the sick and when they are placed amongst insanitary surroundings. The disease was less prevalent in this district than the total number of fatal cases in the between the end of January and end of April accounted for by the schools and Collegiate as well as the two cotton mills and the Gun factory in the district, were quite free from measles. The mortality occurred chiefly amongst the poor. Measles prevailed in this district but not to any serious extent: not one case having come to the medical officer and but 6 by the district superintendent which occurred.
