BOARD OF REVENUE, 26TH NOVEMBER 1886, No. 2576.

PROCEEDINGS OF THE BOARD OF REVENUE.

READ—the following G.O., dated 10th November 1886, No. 2353, Public:—

Read—the following paper:—

File of returns from Covenanted Civil Servants, Military officers in Civil employ, &c., of lands and shares in Registered Companies held by them during 1885.

Order—dated 10th November 1886, No. 2353, Public.

Recorded.

2. The Government observe that in many cases attention has not been paid to the orders on the subject prescribing the forms on which these returns should be submitted.

G.O., No. 880, dated 3rd May 1884.
" " 2437, " 14th Oct. 1885.

The attention of all officers will be drawn to the orders marginally noted. It is also noticed that, where lands and shares in registered companies are held, all the particulars required are often not given. The returns should be as complete as possible, and the declaration prescribed by G.O., No. 1357, dated 1st December 1882, Revenue,
"that no land is held for him by any one else," should always be made by every officer, even in the case of "Nil" returns. It is not necessary that the number and value of shares held in registered companies should be given, as has been done in some instances, this information not being required in the form prescribed by G.O., No. 255, Revenue, dated 22nd February 1884, in supersession of that circulated with G.O.,
No. 511, dated 25th April 1883.

3. The late submission of several of the returns is to be regretted. The Government must insist on their punctual submission in future, as there can be no difficulty in sending them in by the date fixed in G.O., No. 501, dated 26th February 1885.

Lawn - Vegetable garden, small orchard, small tea garden, Lawn Tennis Court, the rest either rocky hill or grass or planted with blue gum and acacia.	About 87 acres.	Freehold.	The entire property (except 37 acres) was bought from Sir. V. H. Lavenex as a dwelling place. My family (wife and children) lived there from February 1885 to October 1885 and continuously from 1886 to my wife's death in February 1890, after which my children continued to reside there till April 1891. At present the house is let to Mrs. J. Weir M. C. S. Quite three-fourths of the land is bare rocky hillside, the exception being a vegetable garden about 1/2 or 2 acres, a small orchard of about one acre, and 1 or 1/2 acres of land on which stands some tea which are picked and made for my own consumption. Sir V. H. Lavenex had planted some gum and acacia trees on part of the land, which are used for firewood. The 37 acres above referred to were bought by my wife, who had property of her own, partly for grazing purpose and partly to prevent the house from being overlooked. Before her death, my wife transferred the land to me.	Madras Bank Six Shares.	Madras and Mofussil Branches.	10		Vide my letter No 790 dated 12 th December 1891.

East India Company was constituted or Fort St. George founded. Save for the tall spire of its lately rebuilt cathedral, San Thomé can have changed little in its sea aspect during two hundred years. (At the end of the seventeenth century its fortifications had already been demolished, and the almost ruined town, though still inhabited by Portuguese, was governed by the servants of the Mogul.)

Three miles north of San Thomé is Madras itself. Not till the city comes into view are the changes apparent that have been wrought by the hand of man. A noble marina now skirts the shore from San Thomé. The towers and minarets of the public buildings at Chépaik rise among the trees. The traveler is borne past the mouth of a river, closed, except during the rains, by a bank of sand thrown up by the eternal surf. It is spanned by a girder bridge, over which is seen the greensward of the Island, an area sacred to martial exercises, polo and gymkhanas. The Island is formed by two branches of the river, or rather by two separate streams having a common outlet to the sea. Next is passed the historic fortress of St. George, the spire of its venerable church towering above the white colonnaded buildings of the eastern front, and the British flag floating from the tall mast at the Sea Gate. Not so long ago the waves washed the face of the fortifications, but with the construction of the modern harbour the ever travelling sand has banked up against its southern pier, and the foreshore has advanced until the Fort looks out on the ocean across a wide expanse of solid ground.

Passing the splendid pile of the High Court, which bristles with domes and gilded minarets, and is surmounted by a lighthouse, the voyager enters a square artificial harbour, and sees beyond its jetties and warehouses a mile-long line of public buildings and mercantile offices. Behind this line, though hidden from view, is a square mile of densely populated area, covered with a network of narrow streets and squalid stums, constituting the city proper. Known almost from its origin as Black Town, it has lately received the more euphonious name of Georgetown, in memory of a visit paid by the Sovereign when Prince of Wales. North of Georgetown are the suburbs of Royapuram and Tondiarpet, and west of it those of Vepery and Pursevaikun, with Kilpaik farther in the background. West of the Island are Egmore and Chéput, districts bounded on the south by the winding course of the river now known as the Cooum. South of its placid backwater, which resembles a lake more than a river, lie Government House and Park, and the thickly populated Moslem quarter of Triplicane; while to the westward, is situated the residential district of Nungunbaikun. South of Nungunbaikun and Triplicane are Teynampet and Mylapore respectively, the latter embracing San Thomé. Yet farther south is the suburb of Adyar, on the picturesque banks of the river of the same name. The chief residential districts for Europeans are those of Egmore, Chéput, Nungunbaikun, Teynampet, and Adyar, all occupied by snow-white pillared mansions, each standing in its own spacious and umbrageous compound.

Two hundred years ago Madras existed on a scale far smaller. The Fort, less than half its present size, was the European town: the native city, since swept away, was contiguous to it on its northern side. Georgetown was a sparsely populated suburb, occupied by gardens and 'garden-houses,' whither the Company's servants retired for rest and relaxation. The districts to the westward were marked by tiny villages, centres of agricultural areas held by the Company on precarious grants from the government of the country, while everything south of Triplicane was native territory, over which the British had no dominion. In the following pages an attempt is made to describe the origin of the settlement, and to trace the successive stages of its remarkable development down to the end of the eighteenth century.

THE COROMANDEL COAST.

At the time of the founding of Fort St. George, in the year 1649, the East India Company's principal settlements were Surat on the west coast of the Indian peninsula, and Bantam in the island of Java. A President and Council governed each settlement with its subordinate out-stations. The factories on the Coromandel coast, the chief of which was Masulipatam, were
