27th June 1893.

No. 261.

From

A. REA, ESQUIRE,

SUPERINTENDENT, ARCHAEOLOGICAL SURVEY,

MADRAS,

To

The Chief Secretary
to the Government of Madras.

Sir,

With reference to G. O., dated 8th May 1893, No. 369. P. I have the honour to submit the annual report of survey operations conducted during the year 1892-93.

2. During the first quarter of the field season a survey was made of the principal temples at Kumbakonam. There are seventeen chief temples, with others smaller and of lesser note in the town. Those at which work was done are the large temples of Kumbesvara, Sarangapani, Ramaswami, Nagesvara, Vanapurisami, Kasivisvanatha and Somesvara. The work consists of survey drawings, a fine set of photographs, and papier-maché moulds for plaster casts of ornament. Lists will be found in ^{Paragraph 17.} ~~the appendix.~~

3- Some of the temples are architecturally so effective as Madura and some of the other great Dravidian temples. Some of them contain good examples of carved stone work, the third-mentioned temple specially so. Their outer works do not date earlier than the 17th century, and the temples have been assigned to that date. But in several of them, there are shrines and other buildings of the 11th century. These features will be fully gone into when an illustrated report comes to be written.

4- In the Kumbesvara temple are a number of vahanas or vehicles for the gods, overlaid with ornamented plates of beaten gold and silver. As examples of the work of the silversmith, they, and some other jewels and pūja utensils from the same temple, would be specially serviceable for illustration in the Journal of Indian Art.

5- During a tour through parts of Cuddapah and of Bellary, I inspected for conservation the temple at Sompalli, the fort at Siddhavattam, and the cave temple at Basarakodu.

29.11.92
Pun.

On these a separate report was submitted. For the same purpose, the ancient Chōla temples at Kulumandal and Ukhal in North Arcot were visited. During the course of the tour some other buildings, below noted, were inspected.

6- About a mile from Basarakodu, on the road to Adoni, is a cave temple of Someśvara. It is a small, nearly square, natural cave on the side of a rocky hill. In front is a brick porch and doorway. On the rock over the shrine is a small brick tower. On an artificial platform in front is a small four-pillared mandapam, and a Telugu inscription on a rock, with the letters partly flaked off by fire. A linga, some nāga and sculptured stones stand by the side of a rough stairway which leads up to the cave. The cave seems to have been used as a temple for a long period; but the accompanying buildings are modern.

7- Between the 41st and 42nd milestones on the main road running south-east of Adoni are four virakals, each with three sculptured compartments.

8. About 6 miles east of Siddha-vattam, on the left bank of the river near the village of Penna Perum,
are two other cave temples of the same class as those above noted. They stand at the head of a gorge in a rocky hill, a mile-and-a-half east of the village. They are natural caves in the rock, with brick-built walls in front. One is dedicated to Narasimha, and the other to the Amman. On a carved stone at the former is a Telugu inscription.
A mile east of the same village
is a small, deserted, ancient stone temple of Bhairawa. It is built on a platform on the side of a hill facing the river.

In a field close to the river and half-a-mile east of the village, lies a Telugu inscribed stone. It measures 5 feet by 1 foot.
It is nearly buried in the earth.

9. In Vantimitta, in the Siddhavattam taluk, is a large temple of Kodanda Rāmasvāmi built by the Vijayanagar kings.
It stands on the south of the village near an extensive tank. It is comprised in a single court, with stone walls and brick superstructure designed

5
in niches and pediments. There are three lofty gōpurams. Inside the principal entrance are three inscribed stones with dates S. 1477 and 1480.
There are numbers of other inscribed stones on the floor of the courtyard.
The most ornate part of the building is the Mahā mandapam, which is finely carved and sculptured.

Outside the east gōpuram, and facing it, is a small shrine of the same date. The pillars of a porch in front are well carved.

At the north-west of the village is a small temple of Gopala-svāmi. There is an inscribed stone on the north wall.

At the east of the village
some nāgakals, nandis, and other sculptured stones stand under a tree. They are occasionally worshipped.

On the hill to the west is a small pillared mandapam.

10. During the second portion of the field season excavations were made at the Buddhist site of Arugōlu in the Godāvāri District.
Russ | (Vide G.O., dated 13th July, 1892 No. 491 P.)

The place covers several square miles, and marks the site of what has evidently been a large town and important religious centre. The existing remains consist of the ruins of a large vihāra, with two small stūpas near; a large stūpa (Chinna Lanza dibba), with a vihāra and numbers of small votive stūpas around; and a large mound (Pedda Lanza dibba) containing the remains of a rectangular building, on which a local Sund bungalow has recently been built. Surrounding it is a considerable number of small votive stūpas.

11. - At the former, I unearthed some large vases and pots in earthenware, a number of bones of a large ruminant and other articles from the cells and centre of the stūpas. At the second, two relic caskets, one of them being a large rough laterite boulder with a conical cavity covered with a round polished slab of gneiss, and containing a crystal phial with some bones and ashes. Among other objects excavated around the building were a number of cut stone architectural details, including the rail, and facing stones of the dome, and a sculptured marble slab. Photographs and drawings of the principal of these objects were taken. Digging was also done at some of the votive stūpas around Pedda Lanza dibba. Complete notes of the excavation for a future report were made.

12. - The remains of a stūpa were discovered in a mound among some jungle at Kondraprōlu near Arugōlu. Kadizetha, Kōvuru, Tōgama, and Vadapalle were visited and the remains inspected.

13. - Some ancient remains near Chandragiri were inspected. A survey was also made of the finely sculptured Chalukyan temple at Kambaduru in the Anantapur district, and a large number of sheets of architectural detail and sculpture drawn. Those finished before the close of the official year, only, are included in the ^{accompanying} ~~list~~ list.

14. - Twelve sheets of enlarged drawings of selected Buddhist ornament from marbles in the Museum were made for incorporation in a report. Some drawings with descriptive notes were sent for the Technical Art series. Inking work was done on ⁸⁵ drawings in office; and 76 new drawings, 62 photographs, and 29 papier mache' moulds for plaster casts prepared in the field. Two progress reports were submitted. A report on Buddhist Antiquities with 47 illustrative plates was sent to Government for publication. Proofs of the report had been issued before the end of the year. An article on Dravidian architectural details was prepared for the Journal of Indian Art. The Bhattacharya relics, discovered the previous year, and the most of those more recently found at Arugolu were deposited in the Madras Museum.

16.- The Ancient remains at Arugâlu were brought to notice by the collector of Godâvari, as also others at Jallur and Pittapur. The collector of Cuddapah discovered some ancient inscribed slabs at Madanapalle. Repairs to buildings at Pulicat, Seven Pagodas, Hampi, Kulamandel and Siddharattam were passed by Government. The vernacular lists of ancient remains in Coorg were translated and sent to Government. Arrangements were made for a tour at the beginning of next official year. A section of the Amaravati rail was fitted up in the Madras Museum. The curious Jaina column, mentioned in the previous year's report as having been discovered at Bezvada, was purchased for the Museum.

17.- The following are lists of large sheet drawings, photographs, and moulds for plaster casts:—

READ—the following paper:—

From A. REA, Esq., Superintendent, Archaeological Survey, Madras, to the Chief Secretary to Government, dated Bangalore, 27th June 1893, No. 261.

With reference to G.O., dated 8th May 1893, No. 369 P., I have the honour to submit the annual report of survey operations conducted during the year 1892-93.

2. During the first quarter of the field season a survey was made of the principal temples at Kumbakonam. There are seventeen chief temples with others smaller and of lesser note in the town. Those at which work was done are the large temples of Kumbesvara, Sarangapani, Ramasvami, Nagavesvara, Vanapuravesvara, Kasivisvanatha and Somesvara. The work consists of survey drawings, a fine set of photographs, and papier maché moulds for plaster casts of ornament. Lists will be found in paragraph 17.

3. None of the temples are architecturally so effective as Madura and some of the other great Dravidian temples. Some of them contain good examples of carved stone work, the third mentioned temple specially so. Their outer works do not date earlier than the 17th century, and the temples have been assigned to that date. In several of them there are shrines and other buildings of the 11th century. These features will be fully gone into when an illustrated report comes to be written.

4. In the Kumbesvara temple are a number of vahanas, or vehicles for the gods, overlaid with ornamented plates of beaten gold and silver. As examples of the work of the silversmith, they, and some other jewels and puja utensils from the same temple, could be specially serviceable for illustration in the Journal of Indian Art.

5. During a tour through parts of Cuddapah and of Bellary, I inspected for preservation the temple at Sompalli, the fort at Siddhavattam, and the cave temple at Asarakodu. On these a separate report was submitted. For the same purpose, the ancient Chola temples at Kulamandal and Ukkal in North Arcot were visited. During the course of the tour some other buildings below noted were inspected.

6. About a mile from Basarakodu on the road to Adoni is a cave temple of mesvara. It is a small, nearly square, natural cave on the side of a rocky hill. In front is a brick porch and doorway. On the rock over the shrine is a small brick tower. On an artificial platform in front is a small four-pillared mandapam and a Telugu inscription on a rock with the letters partly flaked off by fire. A linga, a naga and sculptured stones stand by the side of a rough stairway which leads up to the cave. The cave seems to have been used as a temple for a long period, but the accompanying buildings are modern.

7. Between the 41st and 42nd milestones on the main road running south-east from Adoni are four virakals, each with three sculptured compartments.

8. About six miles east of Siddhavattam on the left bank of the river near the village of Penna Peruru are two other cave temples of the same class as those above noted. They stand at the head of a gorge in a rocky hill, a mile and-a-half east of a village. They are natural caves in the rock with brick-built walls in front.

One is dedicated to Narasimha and the other to the Amman. On a carved stone at the former is a Telugu inscription. A mile east of the same village is a small, deserted, ancient stone temple of Bhairawa. It is built on a platform on the side of a hill facing the river.

In a field close to the river and half a-mile east of the village lies a Telugu inscribed stone. It measures 5 feet by 1 foot. It is nearly buried in the earth.

9. In Vontimitta, in the Siddhavattam taluk, is a large temple of Kodanda Rāmasvāmi built by the Vijayanagar kings. It stands on the south of the village near an extensive tank. It is comprised in a single court with stone walls and brick superstructure designed in niches and pediments. There are three lofty gōpurams. Inside the principal entrance are three inscribed stones with dates S. 1477 and 1480. There are numbers of other inscribed stones on the floor of the courtyard. The most ornate part of the building is the Mahā mandapam, which is finely carved and sculptured.

Outside the east gōpuram and facing it is a small shrine of the same date. The pillars of a porch in front are well carved.

At the north-west of the village is a small temple of Gopalasvāmi. There is an inscribed stone on the north wall.

At the east of the village some nāgakals, nandis and other sculptured stones stand under a tree. They are occasionally worshipped.

On the hill to the west is a small pillared mandapam.

10. During the second portion of the field season excavations were made at the Buddhist site of Arugōlu in the Gōdāvari district (vide G.O., dated 13th July 1892, No. 491 P.).

The place covers several square miles and marks the site of what has evidently been a large town and important religious centre. The existing remains consist of the ruins of a large vihāra with two small stūpas near, a large stūpa (Chinna Lanja dibba) with a vihāra and numbers of small votive stūpas around, and a large mound (Pedda Lanja dibba) containing the remains of a rectangular building on which a Local Fund bungalow has recently been built. Surrounding it is a considerable number of small votive stūpas.

11. At the former I unearthed some large vases and pots in earthenware, a number of bones of a large ruminant and other articles from the cells and centre of the stūpas; at the second, two relic caskets, one of them being a large rough laterite boulder with a conical cavity covered with a round polished slab of gneiss and containing a crystal phial with some bones and ashes. Among other objects excavated around the building were a number of cut stone architectural details including the rail and facing stones of the dome and a sculptured marble slab. Photographs and drawings of the principal of these objects were taken. Digging was also done at some of the votive stūpas around Pedda Lanja dibba. Complete notes of the excavation for a future report were made.

12. The remains of a stūpa were discovered in a mound among some jungle at Kondraprōlu near Arugōlu. Kadiyetha, Kōvuru, Tōgama and Vadapalle were visited and the remains inspected.

13. Some ancient remains near Chandragiri were inspected. A survey was also made of the finely sculptured Chalukyan temple at Kambaduru in the Anantapur district and a large number of sheets of architectural detail and sculpture drawn. Those finished before the close of the official year only are included in the accompanying list.

14. Twelve sheets of enlarged drawings of selected Buddhist ornament from marbles in the Museum were made for incorporation in a report. Some drawings with descriptive notes were sent for the Technical Art series. Inking work was done on 85 drawings in office, and 76 new drawings, 62 photographs and 29 papier maché moulds for plaster casts prepared in the field. Two progress reports were submitted. A report on Buddhist antiquities with 47 illustrative plates was sent to Government for publication. Proofs of the report had been issued before the end of the year. An article on Dravidian architectural details was prepared for the Journal

Indian Art. The Bhattiprōlu reliefs discovered the previous year and the most of those more recently found at Arugōlu were deposited in the Madras Museum.

16. The ancient remains at Arugōlu were brought to notice by the Collector of Gōdāvari, as also others at Jallur and Pithāpuram. The Collector of Cuddapah discovered some ancient inscribed slabs at Madanapalle. Repairs to buildings at Pulicat, Seven Pagodas, Hampi, Kulamandal and Siddhavattam were passed by Government. The vernacular lists of ancient remains in Coorg were translated and sent to Government. Arrangements were made for a tour at the beginning of next official year. A section of the Amarāvati rail was fitted up in the Madras Museum. The curious Jaina column, mentioned in the previous year's report as having been discovered at Bezwada, was purchased for the Museum.
