16. The ancient remains at Arugôlu were brought to notice by the Collector of Gôdâvari, as also others at Jallur and Pithâpuram. The Collector of Cuddapah discovered some ancient inscribed slabs at Madanapalle. Repairs to buildings at Pulicat, Seven Pagodas, Hampi, Kulamandal and Siddhavattam were passed by Government. The vernacular lists of ancient remains in Coorg were translated and sent to Government. Arrangements were made for a tour at the beginning of next official year. A section of the Amarâvati rail was fitted up in the Madras Museum. The curious Jaina column, mentioned in the previous year's report as having been discovered at Bezwada, was purchased for the Museum.

17. The following are lists of large sheet drawings, photographs * and moulds for plaster casts :—

Number.	Description.
974.	Ground plan of Sî Vâtêsvâsvâmi temple, Kantiagodu, Ganjâm district.
975.	Sculptured slabs in various parts of do. do. do.
976.	Longitudinal section of and sculptures from do. do. do.
977.	Sculptured stone on the north prakara of do. do. do.
978.	Do. do. of do. do.
979.	Do. do. of do. do.

One is dedicated to Narasimha and the other to the Amman. On a carved stone at the former is a Telugu inscription. A mile east of the same village is a small, deserted, ancient stone temple of Bhairawa. It is built on a platform on the side of a hill facing the river.

In a field close to the river and half a-mile east of the village lies a Telugu inscribed stone. It measures 5 feet by 1 foot. It is nearly buried in the earth.

9. In Vontimitta, in the Siddhavattam taluk, is a large temple of Kodanda Râmasvâmi built by the Vijayanagar kings. It stands on the south of the village near an extensive tank. It is comprised in a single court with stone walls and brick superstructure designed in niches and pediments. There are three lofty gôpurams. Inside the principal entrance are three inscribed stones with dates S. 1477 and 1480. There are numbers of other inscribed stones on the floor of the courtyard. The most ornate part of the building is the Mahâ maṇḍapam, which is finely carved and sculptured.

Outside the east gôpuram and facing it is a small shrine of the same date. The pillars of a porch in front are well carved.

At the north-west of the village is a small temple of Gopalasvâmi. There is an inscribed stone on the north wall.

At the east of the village some nâgakals, nandis and other sculptured stones stand under a tree. They are occasionally worshipped.

On the hill to the west is a small pillared maṇḍapam.

10. During the second portion of the field season excavations were made at the Buddhist site of Arugôlu in the Gôdâvari district (vide G.O., dated 13th July 1892, No. 491 P.).

The place covers several square miles and marks the site of what has evidently been a large town and important religious centre. The existing remains consist of the ruins of a large vihâra with two small stûpas near, a large stûpa (Chinna Lanja dibba) with a vihâra and numbers of small votive stûpas around, and a large mound (Pedda Lanja dibba) containing the remains of a rectangular building on which a Local Fund bungalow has recently been built. Surrounding it is a considerable number of small votive stûpas.

11. At the former I unearthed some large vases and pots in earthenware, a number of bones of a large ruminant and other articles from the cells and centre of the stûpas; at the second, two relic caskets, one of them being a large rough laterite boulder with a conical cavity covered with a round polished slab of gneiss and containing a crystal phial with some bones and ashes. Among other objects excavated around the building were a number of cut stone architectural details including the rail and facing stones of the dome and a sculptured marble slab. Photographs and drawings of the principal of these objects were taken. Digging was also done at some of the votive stûpas around Pedda Lanja dibba. Complete notes of the excavation for a future report were made.

12. The remains of a stûpa were discovered in a mound among some jungle at Kondraprôlu near Arugôlu. Kadiyetha, Kôvuru, Tôgama and Vadapalle were visited and the remains inspected.

13. Some ancient remains near Chandragiri were inspected. A survey was also made of the finely sculptured Chalukyan temple at Kambaduru in the Anantapur district and a large number of sheets of architectural detail and sculpture drawn. Those finished before the close of the official year only are included in the accompanying list.

14. Twelve sheets of enlarged drawings of selected Puâdhist ornament from marbles in the Museum were made for incorporation in a report. Some drawings with descriptive notes were sent for the Technical Art series. Inking work was done on 85 drawings in office, and 76 new drawings, 62 photographs and 29 papier maché moulds for plaster casts prepared in the field. Two progress reports were submitted. A report on Buddhist antiquities with 47 illustrative plates was sent to Government for publication. Proofs of the report had been issued before the end of the year. An article on Dravidian architectural details was prepared for the Journal

GOVERNMENT OF MADRAS.

PUBLIC DEPARTMENT.

READ—the following paper:—

From A. REA, Esq., Superintendent, Archæological Survey, Madras, to the Chief Secretary to Government, dated Bangalore, 27th June 1893, No. 261.

With reference to G.O., dated 8th May 1893, No. 369 P., I have the honour to submit the annual report of survey operations conducted during the year 1892-93.

2. During the first quarter of the field season a survey was made of the principal temples at Kumbakónam. There are seventeen chief temples with others smaller and of lesser note in the town. Those at which work was done are the large temples of Kumbéśvara, Sarangapāni, Ramasvāmi, Nāgēśvara, Vānapurēśvara, Kāsivisvanādhā and Somēśvara. The work consists of survey drawings, a fine set of photographs, and papier maché moulds for plaster casts of ornament. Lists will be found in paragraph 17.

3. None of the temples are architecturally so effective as Madura and some of the other great Dravidian temples. Some of them contain good examples of carved stone work, the third mentioned temple specially so. Their outer works do not date earlier than the 17th century, and the temples have been assigned to that date. But in several of them there are shrines and other buildings of the 11th century. These features will be fully gone into when an illustrated report comes to be written.

4. In the Kumbéśvara temple are a number of vāhanas, or vehicles for the gods, overlaid with ornamented plates of beaten gold and silver. As examples of the work of the silversmith, they, and some other jewels and pūja utensils from the same temple, would be specially serviceable for illustration in the Journal of Indian Art.

5. During a tour through parts of Cuddapah and of Bellary, I inspected for conservation the temple at Sompalli, the fort at Siddhavattam, and the cave temple at Basarakōdu. On these a separate report was submitted. For the same purpose, the ancient Chōla temples at Kulamandal and Ukkal in North Arcot were visited. During the course of the tour some other buildings below noted were inspected.

6. About a mile from Basarakōdu on the road to Adóni is a cave temple of Somēśvara. It is a small, nearly square, natural cave on the side of a rocky hill. In front is a brick porch and doorway. On the rock over the shrine is a small brick tower. On an artificial platform in front is a small four-pillared mandapam and a Telugu inscription on a rock with the letters partly flaked off by fire. A linga, some nāga and sculptured stones stand by the side of a rough stairway which leads up to the cave. The cave seems to have been used as a temple for a long period, but the accompanying buildings are modern.

7. Between the 41st and 42nd milestones on the main road running south-east of Adóni are four virakals, each with three sculptured compartments.

8. About six miles east of Siddhavattam on the left bank of the river near the village of Penna Peruru are two other cave temples of the same class as those above noted. They stand at the head of a gorge in a rocky hill, a mile and-a-half east of the village. They are natural caves in the rock with brick-built walls in front.

Enclosure.

Extract from letter from Dr. R. Hoernle to Dr. E. Hultzsch, dated The Madrasa, Wellesly Square, Calcutta, 28th July 1893; translated from the German.

"Many thanks for your letter of 7th and the Report.
You have sent the one of August 1892; but I see from it that there are still others existing. I should be very grateful to you if you would send me a copy of all your Progress Reports hitherto published, and of the future ones.

"Vol. I. and Vol. II, Parts I + II of your South-Indian Inscriptions I have received all right.
I had mislaid them, and had thus forgotten that they had reached me all right. I thank you for your inquiries."

might be so good as to send one copy of each to Dr.
Hoernle.

3. I further request that the name of Dr. A.
Frühner, Archaeological Survey, Lucknow, whose Annual Reports are being sent by the North-West Provinces Government to Mr. Rea and myself, might be added, along with the name of Dr. Hoernle, to the distribution list of future Archaeological Reports.

4. I beg to enclose a copy of Mr. Rea's last Report, on page 7 of which I have added the addresses of Dr. Hoernle and Dr. Frühner, and have corrected a few misprints and inserted some changes of address.

I have the honour to be, Sir,
your most obedient servant,
E. Hultzsch

PROCEEDINGS OF THE MADRAS GOVERNMENT.

Read the following paper:—

Sir,
With reference to G.O., dated 19th July 1893, No. 677,
Financial, and in continuation of my letter No. 269, dated 8th July 1893, I have the honour to submit herewith an extract from a letter from Dr. Koenig, which reached me to-day. It appears from this letter that Dr. Koenig had received copies of South-Indian Inscriptions, Vol. I. and Vol. II, Parts I & II, but had mislaid and forgotten them. I regret very much to have troubled Government in vain, but venture to plead in excuse that I thought it only right to communicate to Government a request which had been made by a scholar of the ability and standing of Dr. Koenig.

2. As regards Dr. Koenig's fresh request, I suggest that his name might be added to the distribution list of my Annual Report for 1892-93. Of the Annual Report for 1891-92, I have already sent him a spare copy. I do not know if copies of ^{the} earlier reports are
