C. No 1753
2042
2-10-93
In reference to my letters No. 1874 and 9.9.93 I have the honor to submit the following facts which bear out my statement as to the difficulties imposed on government servants stationed in remote districts by refusing them permission to draw their surplus salaries in Madras.

2. Since the Accountant-General refused my permission to continue drawing my salary in Madras I have been obliged to pay my salary, as drawn, into the local branch of the Bank of Madras here. The Agent at first informed me that the Bank would accept ~~any~~ deposits for which they would give interest. Since then in the space of a week I have had 2 varying statements from him of the time on which they will take. It is clearly a matter of uncertainty whether they will accept in a given month or not. They have a local monopoly and intend to make the best use they can of it.

3. I then, intending to remit by this means to Madras, asked for large value Madras Notes, from the money which the Agent had of mine in his hands, as they became available. In answer to this request he has finally (after a correspondence of some length) informed me that he refuses to give me any such notes for the purpose of remittance in order to force me to remit to Madras through the Bank - for which he will charge me $\frac{1}{4}$ per cent.

My salary bills for May and June were sent by me to my Agents in Madras and were cashed in due course by The Accountant-General there. I sent up my July salary bill also to my Agents and received it back with an endorsement copy of which is enclosed. A.

2 Upon receipt of this I wrote to the Accountant-General to ask if there was any reason why I should not be permitted to continue drawing my salary in Madras and he replied in letter N^o 2441 29.8.93. After 3 telegrams had passed. Copies enclosed (C. D. E). The Accountant-General finally in his telegram of 8th (Copy F) has declared the sanction of Government to be necessary before my request can be granted. I accordingly write to Government to request that I may be allowed to draw my salary through my Agents in Madras so long as it is more convenient for me to do so than to draw it here.

3. I am able to make the great mass of my payments by cheques on Madras and the amount of ready money which I require here is consequently not large.

The concession which I ask for is one which has never to my knowledge been previously refused by any Accountant-General in Madras. The compliance with it is obviously a great convenience to officers who reside, like myself, in remote districts and

4. The request is I think one which might well have been granted, if on no other ground, on the willingness to oblige which should characterize all intercourse between different branches of Her Majesty's Service - when there is no reason on public ground for refusing to accede to a request made.

In any case if the Accountant-General intended to refuse to cash any more of my salary bills - after the June one - in Madras he might, in courtesy at least, have sent the last pay certificate at the time of cashing that bill to save me from the trouble and annoyance of sending the next salary bill to Madras in vain.

Sir,

In reply to your telegram of 8th I would call your attention to the fact that the request which you have now finally refused is one which had pre-viously been granted previously by the per-manent Accountant General, for whom you are temporarily officiating.

2. It is one the compliance with which must necessarily be a great convenience to officers serving, as I am, in remote districts - while it does not I believe cause any extra trouble to you, your office, or indeed to any one except the Agents in Madras who receive the pay and are repaid for doing so.

3. The only reason which you give for refusing this request is that it is not according to "Manual". I am writing now to the Government of Madras to ask them for the sanction which you finally declare to be necessary before grant-ing my request. Though you at first wrote that all that was required was to apply to your office - which I did at once.

4 The request is one which I consider might well have been granted: if on no other ground - out of that readiness to oblige which should characterize all intercourse between the different branches of Her Majesty's Service - unless there are good reasons on public grounds for refusing to accede to a request made.

2. Your very positive statement has caused me to renew the enquiry and I find that it is only during authorized vacations when Judicial and Educational officers are absent from their proper districts, they are allowed to draw pay from some other treasury and that in your own case in July 1891 this office refused to permit your Agents to encash your bill in Madras after the opening of your Court. I am therefore placed by you in the unfortunate position of being compelled to hold that the statement above quoted to which you have committed yourself is unfounded. I am

No. 2805

From

J. E. Brooke Esq.,

Offg. ACCOUNTANT-GENERAL TO THE GOVERNMENT OF MADRAS,

To

THE Chief Secretary to Government, Financial Department.

SIR,

Mr H. J. Joseph, Acting District Judge of Ganjam, informs me that he has applied to Government for sanction to draw his pay in Madras instead of at Ganjam and as his letter to me contains statements which I am bound to challenge, it seems to me to be desirable that I should place the case at once before Government.

2. In a letter dated 17th August 1893, Mr Joseph called my attention to the refusal of my office to pay his salary here after the reopening of his Court at Ganjam on the 22nd July, and requested to be informed why he should not be allowed to continue drawing his pay in Madras through his Agents, if he wished to do so. In reply he was informed that Officers could be paid only from their own District Treasuries and that it was not desirable they should be paid elsewhere.

But that if there were any special reasons for an officer drawing payment temporarily at the Presidency, he should apply to my office before hand and ascertain whether his request could be complied with for a time.
He thereupon telegraphed for permission to draw from Madras and was asked to state reasons and for how long the indulgence was required. The reason given was that he required money in Madras until after December, and he was then told this was too indefinite and that he should apply to Government.
I may be allowed here to add that the kind of reasons given could scarcely be accepted without every officer in the districts of this Presidency having an equal claim to the concession, and that it would have opened a wide door for an inconvenient and irregular system of business had this been allowed.
3. In reply Mr Joseph has addressed me a letter No 1875 dated 9th September in which he alleges that the request I have refused is one which has frequently been granted previously by the permanent Accountant General for whom you are temporarily officiating and he implies that I virtually promised to allow it on application and that I have shown a want of that readiness to oblige which should characterise all intercourse between different branches of Her Majesty's Service. It will be seen from my response to this communication that both the statements made in Mr Joseph's letter viz about my predecessor freely allowing what I have refused and my failure to keep an implied promise are wholly unfounded, and that Mr Joseph has been distinctly refused the same concession in July 1891. It remains for the Government to decide whether a District Officer who fails to get his own way with the Accountant General is to be allowed to indulge in the license Mr Joseph has used in writing to that effect to vent his disappointment.

4. On the general question of allowing District Officers to draw pay at the Presidency whenever they find it convenient, it will be readily seen that such a provision would be open to serious objection on more than one ground. I am therefore not able to recommend a change in the present practice.
