We can hardly say that they go on duty because then they wd be claiming T. A. from their several depts - I should say that they wd be considered as on casual leave, but extra to ordinary casual leave. That wd upset the case

Yes, they shd have casual leave

22/1

It is submitted that when heads of depts and offices can spare the services of Volunteers serving under them to enable them to attend camps of Exercise the period of absence from work should not count against them as leave of any kind.

If they are allowed to attend "on leave" - very few would go -
