dated 22nd February 1898.

I have the honor with reference to G.O.
No: 1701, Judicial, dated 28th October 1896, sanctioning a Gharri allowance of Rs 25 per mensem for out-door recreation of the ministers of the Nazim, to submit the following for the favourable consideration of the Surgeon-General.

2. The monthly grant of Rs 25, though, apparently, a liberal allowance for gharri hire, is only sufficient to provide for an outing once a month for 48 individual inmates. Considering, however, that there are upwards of 90 European and Eurasian inmates, male and female, and a large number of natives who might be equally benefitted, the scope of utilizing this means of recreation becomes too narrowed and fails to attain the object in view.

3. It has been found, in practice, very difficult to get suitable conveyances whenever they are wanted, and then only at exorbitant rates, while, if cheaper carriages, as the two-wheeled country handies, are employed, they not only prove uncomfortable and risky but require increased supervision on account of so many separate vehicles. SIR,

At G.O. No: 1701, Judicial, dated 28th October 1896, Government on my recommendation sanctioned a monthly allowance of Rs: 25 for hire of bullock coaches for the inmates of the Madras Lunatic Asylum. The Superintendent in a letter, extract of which I attach, brings to notice the extreme desirability of extending this means of recreation so as to embrace as many inmates as possible, and proposes the purchase of a bus and a pair of bullocks for the purpose. From enquiries I learn that the cost of up-keep will not exceed Rs: 10 a month, thus entailing but a small increase to the present grant. As the initial outlay of Rs: 1000 is then the chief expense to be considered, I am in view of the facts now found of recreation is to be of benefit to as large a number of inmates as possible, a fixed number must have an outing daily and to give this effect, it appears to my mind that a large bus capable of accommodating 10 inmates and a couple of attendants would prove in the long run the most economical means of conveyance, and afford the maximum of enjoyment with a minimum of the inconveniences and disadvantages that attach to the use of separate vehicles.

4. The initial cost of a bus and pair of bullocks would not, probably, exceed a thousand rupees, and when once purchased, there will be no further outlay of consequence beyond the up-keep of the bullocks and drivers x x x x.

5. I may add, further that the maintenance of the bus and bullocks on the premises provides a handy means of conveyance always available for other asylum purposes (for which no little sum is expended during the year) such as journeys to and from the railway stations, conveying recovered inmates, taking patients to the official visitors for inspection, bringing packages to the Asylum and so forth. Of course, these uses will only be subsidiary to the main one for which the bus is originally intended and only taken advantage of when the conveyance can be conveniently spared.
