GLOSSARY.

AB

Ab, H. (آب, contracted from the A. أب Ab) A father.

Abai, H. (آپای) Patrimonia], descending from paternal ancestors (land, property).

Ab, H. (P. آب, S. आब) Water.

Abdār, H. (آبدار) A servant whose office it is to prepare water for domestic use, or for drinking.

Abdār khāna, H. (آبدارخانه) The room where such water is kept in suitable earthen vessels.

Abpāshī, H. (آبداشی) Irrigating fields, watering fields; lit. water sprinkling.

Abqānā, H. (آبرقانه) Running water in a trough. Fine.

Ab, H. (آب) Running water, water. In the north-west provinces of Upper India, as in the Punjab, tanks, fountains, or canals, in addition to that which is watered from nature, as the supply from the former is liable to fail in the hot season, Ab land is assessed at a lower rate; in some cases at less than a half of that watered from wells.

Abshān, H. (آبشانی) Land abundantly irrigated.

Abshān, H. (آبشانه) A place plentiful with water, moist or well-soil.

Abqār, H. (آبرقار) A wholesale or retailer of spirituous liquors; lit. a dealer of (running) waters.

Abkāri, or Abkāry, ABKARY, ABKARY, ABKARY.

Abkāry, H. (آبرقاری) or in Telugu ABKARI, (ఆబకరి) Revenue derived from duties levied on the manufacture and use of intoxicating liquors, as tam or toldy, achani, arack, &c., and on intoxicating drugs, whether in solution, infusion, or extract, as opium, camph, china, &c. It is levied on certain licensed distilleries, or in fees for licences granted by the collector to retailers. In some parts of the south of India the Abkāri included duties on eating-shops, gaming-houses, itinerant tumblers, jugglers, and the like. In the Report of the House of Commons, 1832, p. 95, it is said to comprehend duties on pepper and betel; but this is a misstatement, as no such duties are levied; although, in Mysore, the arekanut was sometimes included in the Abkāri farm. The principal regulations in Bengal for the Abkāri duties are xxvii. 1703, x. 1813, xiii. 1816, and vii. 1824.

Abkāri Dāroghā, H. (آبرقاری داروغه) The head native officer appointed to superintend distilleries, spirit-shops, and the like.

Abkāri Mahāl, H. (آبرقاری محال) The department or office of Abkāri, the excise.

Abān, Mar. (अबान, from A. Abdān, q.v.) A particular item in revenue accounts: the grain falling to the share of the Government after deducting the portions of the several shārs, or shares, H. (آب آن) The water of a river, commonly called, as Hindi and Mar. (आबान), Beng. (अबान), Telugu (అబాన), Populous cultivation, as a village or tract of country; the reverse of Bar, H. (بار), waste, deserted.

A village or tract which is designated in revenue phrase as Abād is one from which revenue may be levied; in military topography it denotes a place where supplies may be expected. It occurs also, though less commonly, as Abāda (آباد). Abād karnā means, to introduce or extend cultivation or population, to settle, to people; whence may arise a claim to property through descent from the Abād-kār, the originator or founder. As the first and member of a compound, Abād often denotes a city, as Akhur-ābād, the city of Akhur, or Agra, which he made his capital; Aurang-ābād, the city of Aurang-zeb; Mushād-ābād, the city of Mushād Kuli Khan, Governor of Bengal, by whom it was enlarged and embellished; Shāhjahān ābād, the city of Shāhjahān, or Delhi; with many others of Mohammedan origin and improvement. From the attributives Abād and Abādān come the substantives Abādī, Abādānī, Populousness, cultivation: in Bengali the meanings have been transposed, Ābād (आबाद signifying cultivation, populousness, and Ābādī (आबादी cultivated, peopled.

Abād-beshi, H. (آباد بیشی, from P. beshi بیشی, Ex First assessment of newly-settled or cultivated land
