Mens complying with column 7 of list of officers who attained the age of 55 on 1st January 1913.

Mr. Burrell's education has been a very rudimentary one, and I am certain he is not fit to carry on the duties of a Sub. Divisional Officer. At the same time I know few better men for bridge erection or Platelaying; he can still stand a great deal of exposure, and is very energetic. If Government is prepared to always find a special job for him of the nature indicated above I see no reason why he should not be retained in the Service, but if he is expected to fall into line with other officers of his rank, and to take up duties involving more than the most elementary office work, it would be preferable in the interests of Government and himself to retire him.
