[Despatch Abstract.]

efficient accounts officers, it is necessary that all Assistant Examiners under training should endeavour to make themselves thoroughly acquainted with the text-books, noted on the margin,* even though they may not be required to pass the departmental examination for promotion in them. The study of the following standard works is also recommended:—

Theory and practice of banking by H. D. MacLeod.
Factory accounts by Garcke and Fells.
Railway accounts, Revenue, in America by Marshall M. Kirkman.
Railway accounts in England by Fisher.

The foregoing books cannot be supplied for the use of individual officers at the public cost; but a copy of each may be purchased by Examiners under the special sanction of the Local Government or Administration.

2. In addition to this, the attention of Assistant Examiners should be especially directed to the study of the systems of accounts and audit followed in the Civil and Military Departments of the Government of India as described in their codes

3. It behoves every Assistant Examiner under training to employ all the means in his power to increase his knowledge of the principles and practice of book-keeping in its widest sense, and of audit, banking, and general business, and no Assistant Examiner can expect to attain a high position in the Department if he limits his knowledge to the accounts, audit, and procedure pertaining to the Public Works Department and to the subjects that come before him in the course of his ordinary official business.

Your most obedient servant,
