In reply to your letter No 58 dated 24th January 1899, I have the honour to state that I intend procuring an additional accountant to your office later on as there will soon be several surplus men available for transfer. In the meantime however you may engage a qualified man locally as a temporary Accountant. If this is not feasible, you may advise with the Examiners of Public Works Accounts, Madras, to make use of the services of Mr H. J. Moorhouse, accountant IV grade, on the reserve establishment who is at present employed under his orders.
