ENCLOSURES.

From the Comptroller-General, to the Secretary to the Government of India, Department of Finance and Commerce, dated 14th January 1898, No. 2063.

With reference to article 1286-G. of the Civil Service Regulations directing the payment, by officers travelling in reserved railway carriages, of the usual fares for any person besides themselves travelling in the same carriage, I have the honour to suggest that to enable Audit officers to see to the due recovery of these fares, an addition may be made to the certificate at foot of the form prescribed in Appendix 28 of the Civil Service Regulations or similar forms of requisition showing whether any other person travelled in the same carriage or not and if so, how many, and whether liable to pay full or half fare. The addition might be something like what is given in the margin. If, from the certificate so added, it appears that any recovery is to be made, the Audit officer will calculate the exact amount of fare to be recovered and request the officer concerned to pay it.

In the absence of such a certificate, it will be necessary for the Audit officers, on whom the duty of watching the recoveries is imposed, to address the high functionaries concerned in each case, with a view to elicit the information necessary for purposes of audit. But this does not seem to be desirable, if it can be avoided, and the certificate will obviate the necessity for such special enquiries in many cases.

Further that * (3) persons as below	besides myself are no one is travelling in the same carriage.

* Liable to pay full fare	1
.. .. half	2
Total ..	3

Add the following note to this article:—

NOTE.—When the reserved accommodation is obtained by the purchase of a prescribed number of tickets from the railway, no further payment should be made to the railway in compliance with this article for other persons travelling with the officer. The sum due from the officer on this account will be deducted in his travelling allowance bill from the amount which would otherwise be payable to him as travelling allowance. In this case the following certificate should be appended to the officer's travelling allowance bill and signed by him:—

“Certified that—persons besides myself for whom ^{full} ~~half~~ fares were payable by me travelled with me.”

When the reserved accommodation has been obtained in any other way than the above (e.g., by requisition under Appendix 28 of these Regulations), the officer will pay the fares for persons travelling with him to the railway, by purchasing tickets for such persons, and will sign the following certificate on his requisition form or on his travelling allowance bill:—

“Certified that fares have been duly paid for—persons travelling with me.”

Substitute the following for the certificate at the foot of columns 1 and 2 of the form on page 86 of the Appendices:—

“Certified that conveyance as above has been provided on this requisition; and that the conveyance is required for a journey on public duty. Certified also that fares have been duly paid for—persons travelling with me.”
