Extract from a Letter from the Collector of Nuwoor dated 4th December 1863 No 203.

21. The Government have referred the question to the Medical Department, and the Civil Surgeon of Nuwoor has been directed to investigate the pathology of this disease. At the present time I am glad to say the epidemic is not raging, but were it most violent it would be impossible for Doctor Rees to leave Nuwoor and his numerous patients to make a trip to the Malla Mulla pastures, for the purpose of investigating matters amongst the cattle

22. A suggestion has been put forward in the public prints which I think most excellent. It is that the Government should depute a Veterinary Surgeon to the District for this purpose. Such a visit now would be useless, but if the services of such an Officer can be spared for three Months, from March to May of next year, he would be able by spending those Months on the Malla Mallay, in the locality where herds are driven for pasturage from all the surrounding Districts, to examine the disease minutely, to test the best modes of treatment, and probably to discover some mode of practice that must at least be more efficacious than the present present system of leaving a fatal disease to run its course.

23. I strongly recommend that this step may be taken, and need hardly say that I would afford every assistance to such an Officer in his task and arouse the Ryots to an interest in the measure, which as connected so closely with their agricultural prosperity, they cannot fail to feel.

24. Should the Government be unable to spare the services of a Veterinary Surgeon, I consider that the medicines and appliances required for the treatment recommended by Major Loudon and Assistant Surgeon G. Bidie M. D. should be placed by Government within the Ryots reach.
