

924
Act. He was discharged on the 21st April 1871.

2. A copy of the Schedule filed by him and that of the Judge's order of discharge are enclosed.

3. It appears from the Schedule that his liabilities amounted to Rs. 1,589-4-5; that he was induced to contract the debts to meet the expenses attending on marriages of his two brothers, and subsequently on their deaths, and those of his father and children; and that the demands on him have increased from payment of high rates of interest whenever loans were renewed, and by the payment of Court costs. It also appears from the explanation afforded by him that out of Rs. 1,589-4-5, Rs. 266-4-0 were appropriated by his two relatives, who joined him in the Promissory Notes, and whose bills he was forced to accept in return for the pecuniary assistance rendered by them. His pay per mensem was Rs. 35.

4. After a careful examination of the Schedule and of the statements made by the Insolvent, added to the fact that there was no one to oppose his discharge, and that he was not required to make any payments to his creditors, I think that his liabilities have not arisen from acts of extravagance.

5. He has served in the department about 10½ years.

6. Under these circumstances I request that permission may be accorded for his re-employment in this Office.
