Mutt Kuru Koralu North.

Notes upon the cultivation and cure of Tobacco in the District of Negombo 1st For purposes of Tobacco plantation, the ground is generally prepared during six months of the year. The preparation consists of penning cattle, in about June or July on an open ground, which had been previously cleared of roots and weeds, and in June and July (the planting season) previous to the putting down of the plants, the ground is dug up or ploughed and the soil loosened.

2nd The plants are raised in nurseries. These nurseries are oblong beds, generally about 2 feet in width, and about 30 feet in length. Before the seed is sown in them, the surface soil is loosened, and burnt by the aid of dry sticks and weeds; then the ashes are carefully blown off, and the seed which had been soaked in water the previous day is mixed with sand, because it is too fine and sown in the beds. These beds are carefully covered over with cadfane, so as to prevent the heat of the sun from infusing
