A Case of General Debility, accompanied with Rheumatism, bedridden, night terrors and exhaustion. Recommended changed on 6th of Europe for one year

Has been under my observation for the past two weeks, complaining much of low malarious fever which attacks him at all and any time - accompanied with violent headache, nausea, and hideous nightmares, also suffers from rheumatic pains, and excessive debility. He states that he is much emaciated and unable to carry on his duties.

First Contracted Two

on the North Mullays in the Salem District, and was sent away on Sick Certificate for 4 months in 1872 by Surgeon Major Peterkin M.D. to the Keel-cherries, where he so far recovered himself as to be able to rejoin his appointment at Ellamamore in the Pudukkottai District. Being ordered on duty to the Velumbare Forests in the Malabar District, the fever returned, where only lasted a few days. Was again attacked with fever in the Putha Mullays, also in the range in the Pudukkottai District. Here he also contracted 'Wenque' which added considerably to his suffering, and from the pains of which he still suffers.
He has undergone treatment at the various places where his duty has taken him, but has not been able to take off his fever. He now presents an anemic appearance - dry unperfusable skin foul tongue and a look of exhaustion. It is therefore evident that a sea voyage is absolutely necessary for his recovery and I therefore grant him the following Certificate
