Proceedings of the Madras Government, Financial Department.

11th June 1873.

The labours of Trichinopoly. The Government estimates of its budget were made in 1871, but still show sources of expenditure—Public Works for instance—must gradually decrease and at length, of some reduction of taxes. The Government are now desirous that in your estimate you should consider any such reduction being made, or apparently even contemplated, the income will come to be regarded like a permanent assignment of State funds, and methods of expending it be proposed as a matter of course. Many arrangements, however, without doubt, might even with the Government in Council be gradually undertaken, and their cost spread over several years to the great relief of taxpayers. The Government in Council desire that the tax on salt, brack, and professions be disposed with a bearing the Budget for 1874-75.

Notifications.

Under the provisions of Section 38, Act III. of 1871 (The Town Improvement Act), the Government in Council authorize the Municipal Commissioners for the Town of Trichinopoly, in the Trichinopoly District, to levy, during the year beginning 1st April 1873 and ending 31st March 1874—

A rate on houses, buildings, and lands, according to the actual value thereof.

A tax upon new professions, trades, and callings.

Tolls on carriages, carts, and animals entering the municipal limits at half-schedule rates.

Taxation on shops, houses, and other buildings, according to the value of the same as assessed.
