1874. July 22? I was called two months ago to visit the patient who was suffering from the whole train of symptoms which constitute Dyspepsia - flatulency, nausea, pain in the hepatic region, restless night, irregular action of bowels, furred tongue, irritable pulse & want of appetite. I found that he had been in this condition a long time and that the principal cause, added to the insurmountable effects of a long residence in a tropical climate, was the loss of nearly all his teeth. I prescribed Mineral Acids with Guttan & a mild aperient and advised him to go home to get a new set of teeth and a fresh stock of health at the same time, but he thought he would try a change to the Invalid house which he has lately returned with increased symptoms of dyspepsia. As it is useless to give medicines where the cause and the remedy are so very obvious, I recommended that he may be permitted to proceed to England and grant the following Certificate -
