six months under the following circumstances.

2. It was originally estimated that the work of arranging the records of the Peninsular Survey could be completed within six months, but this expectation has not been fulfilled. The work was conducted under the supervision of the Survey Officer and the Gunastahs worked steadily during the prescribed hours, but the work was too much for them. They had to read every piece of paper in a Daftar before deciding whether it should be preserved or destroyed. The papers had then to be arranged chronologically and and each put with the bundle to the subject of which it belonged, and lists were then prepared. It appears that the records of this Survey have never been arranged and sorted for preservation up to this time.

3. 206 Dafters have been arranged, of which 149 are to be destroyed, and 313 remain to be sorted. Many of these being accounts, it is hoped that their arrangement can be finished within 6 months. The records cannot be left in this incomplete state.

The sale proceeds of the rejected paper will amount to Rs. 250.

The

4. The Tahsildar reports that the records from 1873 have been arranged by the regular Sumastake and preserved in good order and promises to see that they are all kept properly for the future.
