No. 287. Proceedings of Government, 14th June 1877, No. 1,989.

Miscellaneous.

THE Government attach great importance to the information contained in the fortnightly narratives and to their punctual submission. In some instances, however, they regret to observe that there is not as much attention paid to recording the information relating to the fluctuation of prices as they could wish. The matter is of great moment, and the attention of Collectors is specially called to it. In sending in their narratives in future, Collectors should, therefore, take care to enter in the columns headed "Rising," "Falling," and "Stationary" the names of the markets at which each of the three grains,—rice, cholam, or ragi,—is either rising or falling.

An example is given to illustrate the method in which the information should be recorded:

Names of Markets with Prices at each.		Rising at.	Falling at.	Stationary at.
