EXAMINE.—The collections in September 1874 are much above the average of the three years of 1871, 1872, and 1873, but are much below the four years of 1876, 1877, 1878, and 1879. Only in Blount there is a decrease. Now the severity, and still less the continuation, of the frost, which is so common during the autumn. The cold season did not induce any change in the habits of the birds. The birds were not much driven to the south by the frost, as they were in the previous years. The birds were not much driven to the south by the frost, as they were in the previous years. The birds were not much driven to the south by the frost, as they were in the previous years.

The Collections in September 1878, are much above the average of the three years referred to as stated in the return for the previous month to the fact that in the three latter years there was not much arrear balance to be collected. Only in Bhavani there is a decrease below the average and the Tahsildar attributes it to the poverty of the ryots who suffered during the famine. The Collections on the whole are still backward and the attention of the Division Officers and Tahsildars has been called to this matter.
