Sir,

In continuation of my letter of the 17th April 1891, relative to the shipment of Fuel Oil I regret to inform you that shipment was not effected as hoped by the vessel named.

Arrangements are being made for the shipment per Scharlachbeyer, if possible sailing about the 20th May of 5 or 6 Barrels and the remainder will be despatched as expeditiously as practicable.

The previous vessel to the Scharlachbeyer calls at Cardiff after leaving Antwerp, and cannot therefore convey any of the oil, as the authorities at English ports frequently refuse to allow vessels carrying Fuel Oil to enter the harbours.

This is an instance of the difficulty

there is in effecting shipments of this liquid
with any degree of regularity and expedition,
and the same cause may probably prevent
some of the succeeding steamers from Antwerp carrying any of the quantity now under supply.

I have the honour to be.
