Copy of a memorandum No. 6582/IS.D.3., dated 6th April 1920, from the Chief of The General Staff, Army Headquarters, Simla, to the General Officers Commanding, Commands, Independent Divisions and Defended Ports. (except Burma).

The War Office have now definitely intimated that no personnel for armoured motors can be made available for India until the beginning of next trooping season.

2. Such regular personnel for armoured motors as now remains in India, is barely sufficient to man the Armoured Motor Batteries located trans-Indus. These batteries should certainly have first claim on this personnel and steps will be taken to concentrate it accordingly.

3. As, however, no proposals for finding personnel for Armoured Motor Batteries by withdrawing or allotting it from other regular units (British or Indian) can be entertained, the batteries will have to be temporarily disbanded unless arrangements can be made to man them with Indian Defence Force crews until such time as the regular personnel from England arrive next winter.

It is considered that such temporary disbandment would be extremely undesirable in view of the proved utility of these units in times of disturbance; and I am therefore to request you to make special efforts in consultation with local Governments to provide crews by calling for volunteers from Indian Defence Force units, the necessary temporary transfers being effected under your own authority.

A report should be made as early as possible as to the extent to which these efforts are likely to meet with success.
