

6/10/63

Handwritten document with multiple entries, including names, dates, and numerical data. The text is written in a cursive script, likely a historical form or ledger. The document is divided into several sections by horizontal lines, each containing a set of data. The entries are organized in a structured manner, with columns for different categories of information. The handwriting is dense and fills most of the page. There are some large, stylized numbers or signatures interspersed among the entries, such as "295" and "296". The overall appearance is that of an old, handwritten record book or a collection of official documents.
