leaving one half of the levy. The landlords being then pleased that the jodi was too high and asked a reduction on the ground that much of the land had been alienated as swamy by former landlords to the village servants, and to others. The accounts were examined. The levy of ₹1258 was 379-12- of which only 246-15-0 was the revenue of the lands in the enjoyment of the family and the remainder 132-13- in the enjoyment of village officers and family dependents. The Board recommended that the jodi might be fixed at 100 Rs (Proceedings 4th June 1869) and proposed that the Collector be directed to assist the village owners in levying a moderate rate of tax upon all parties in the village, holding means other than for service. The Government on the 19th June 1869 gave authority to reduce the jodi from 175 to 100 Rs and remarked that with such concession the jodis should manage the property without the interference of the Collector and if the head of the village should pay his share they would not object to the Collector assisting him in levying the tax. The alienation to dependents and village servants are shown below -
