Sheet No. 6

Brother Jim to the Abolitionist and claims a share of his estate. Ld. Chancellor decrees for the ground that under such circumstances slaves are to be considered as property & that Owner's claimant is in every sense of the word a creditor of the common debtor, in another suit, against their own father who, under such decree executes the same deed to his brother as the father of Ld. Mansfield would have done & denies the validity of the deed on the ground that the father was incapable of making a valid deed, being at the time in a state of insanity - Ld. Mansfield refuses to set aside the deed on the ground of insanity, but does set it aside on the ground that the deed was executed in Scotland where slavery was not recognized by law - Ld. Mansfield's decision was reversed in the House of Lords on appeal - Ld. Mansfield's decision was reversed in the House of Lords on appeal - Ld. Mansfield's decision was reversed in the House of Lords on appeal in favor of the validity of the deed - Ld. Mansfield's decision was reversed in the House of Lords on appeal [illegible] - Ld. Mansfield's decision was reversed in the House of Lords on appeal
