The Inam is now in the actual enjoyment of Ammaiammál daughter of Sinna Mudali mentioned in the Account of 1238 &c & it is stated that Sinna Mudali got it by purchase. No Bill of sale is produced but it is stated to be lost – One Rámareddi a relative of the original Inamdar claims the Inam as gift to his father under a Will produced by him & he asserts that the Inam was simply mortgaged & not sold to Sinna Mudali – In the absence of the alleged Bill of sale & the accts showing Sinna Mudali's "enjoyment" & not alluding to "purchase" I am really at a loss to give a decision on the subject – the will is an old document, apparently genuine, dated in the year 1833 & ~~all~~ alludes to this Inam as being "under mortgage" – and I submit the case for orders – and I beg to add that in either case a quit Rent of half may be demanded. Ammaiammal, the alleged purchaser ~~heir~~ being heirless & the relative of Donee having had no power ~~the~~ under the Will & the testator having left no eligible heirs except the father of Ramareddi whom she constituted ~~her~~ her heir under the Will 22nd Feby 1861 – Mhadeswa Pillai Dy Coll. I beg further to add that there is another alleged heir of Papa Reddi also claiming the Inam – Under these circumstances, it appears to be the proper course to leave these several claimants to each to contest ... in the Courts – [initials]
