The person whose name I put in, objects to this latter appropriation of the Inam & says it is simply for the Chattram, that his father received the Chattram & its Inams in gift from the ancestor of the claimant & from another Muddareddi who largely contributed to the restoration & improvement of the building after it fell into decay at the Carnatic war, & that subject to the maintenance of the Chattram itself, his own father & himself have been in possession of it & the emoluments upwards of 50 years. Evidence has been taken for this alleged transfer & altho' there is no written Deed of gift produced or alleged, I find that the ~~[illegible]~~ the parties [illegible] did really take place & that there is no doubt of the enjoyment ~~[illegible]~~ for upwards of 50 years. Case No 24 Contd

Rangammal the 1st wife of Venkatasubba Reddi, and her two Daughters in laws No 3 & 4 brought a suit against him & his 2nd wife No 2 for a share in the Property & for subsistence of No 3 & 4 who became widows during their father in law's life time — The Dist's Court of Cuddalore decreed that Half of the Property should go to Rangamma & the other half to No 2 — In October 1853, Venkatasubba Reddi & No 2 executed an agreement to Rangammal making over to her ½ the Inams as her share and further provided for her subsistence and for that of No 3 & 4 by making over the other Half of the Inam to the 3 widows to be enjoyed for life by each of them in equal shares on the condition that each lapsed share shall revert to his 2nd wife No 2 — on Rangamma's death her one

Case N 24 Contd

one Half share is inherited by her daughter's son No 1 - The 1/3rd of the other Half she enjoyed under the terms of the agreement reverted to N 2 - The remaining 2/3rds will revert also to N 2 eventually - N 3 & 4 have only life interest in them - N 2 is stated to have an adopted son who is her own brother - ~~the adoption~~ however It is not clear whether the adoption was mentioned in the Courts Pro:- It is not mentioned in the agreement - It is however unnecessary now to enquire into this - as N 2 has other heirs in No 1 even if there were no adopted son -
