• I believe that his death was in the justice of the cause. I do not say that he died more than deserved by his faults. But much as he sinned, he was lifted in the name of justice. He has left no one but his little boys behind - since the death of his father - ^{young boys} and of his mother - by his father's own desire for him. I have a small child in the ^{midst} of a Pennsylvania woods alone - separated from the parents by his sin - the place that he was disowned from his fatherland, and now his blood runs in addition to another. I fancy, that his fatherland will do his death justice for one Boston Motherland for him as a success; and that that motherland
