It appears due to the [illegible] Inam established in antiquity & its deduction from the assessment of the Pollam. This is an old Inam	In the Inam Dittam as Muppidari Amman Koil [illegible]		[illegible] of an old year	The Inam is now included in the Jeyan lands of the Poligar when & wherefore not known. It is not known to what temple this endowment was made. The people have got their own temple in the village & they have been keeping that up from their own contributions. This seems to be a separate temple. If it were the temple endowed with the Inam, the people would have claimed the Inam for their temple.		It is an old Inam. No Puja kept up. Nothing is known of the temple for which this endowment was made. The Poligar enjoys it, including it in his Jeyan lands. The Poligar's Vakil acknowledging the fact of its resumption, states that he does not know when & wherefore the Inam was resumed.
