FOREWORD.

Though it has been found impracticable to revise the whole of the Index for the year 1919 in the light of Mr. Tottenham's instructions because of the already standing matter in the press, yet some slight changes have been introduced where possible agreeably to the above instructions; e.g., where the orders of other departments have been indexed in the Judicial Department of which the present one is the consolidated Index.

2. Henceforth, references to papers of other departments indexed in Judicial Department can be traced only through the department concerned given as the main head, instead of through the 'usual' index head; e.g., a paper relating to Excise Advisory Committees does not find its proper place under the alphabet 'E' with the above heading (on page 66), but needs tracing out under the main head 'REVENUE DEPARTMENT' wherein the usual head follows as a sub-head in its proper place (on page 171). Thus all the Government Orders of other departments are clubbed together in one place under the headings of the departments concerned.
