Upon consideration of the advantages of establishing a trade with Pegu for the procuring of saltpetre and sticklac, and there being a probability of succeeding therein in consequence of the withdrawal of the Dutch Factories thence, it is resolved to employ a Portuguese, John Perera de Faria Junior, an inhabitant of this place voyaging thither who is well experienced in those parts, to treat with the King of Burma and Pegu upon articles of Commerce. A paper of articles and also Commission and Instructions for the said John Perera read and passed and ordered to be translated into Portuguese.

It is agreed between the Agent Governour and Councill and the said John Perera that the latter in consideration of his pains and charges in negotiating these Capitulations shall when the said treaty shall be effected have the *moyety of the benefits arising out of the customs of

* This phrase is explained to mean that, whereas the Customs of Serian were 14 per cent. taken in specie and 2½ per cent. in Money for the Queen after sale of the remainder of the goods, making together about 16½ per cent., if the King should grant the English a trade paying in all but 5 per cent. Customs, as proposed in the Articles, then there would be a saving in the customs of about 11½ per cent., a moyety of which (or so much as should be saved by the King's concession) was to be the Commissioner's remuneration.

*Serian upon the whole Cargo of the first ship of the Company that shall arrive at Serian after conclusion of the treaty, payable at that place to the said John Perera, his heirs, executors, and assigns, and nothing further shall be demanded save 30 pagodas allowed for the charges of translating the Articles into Burma language and other such necessary charges, payable whether the treaty take effect or not, all charges in excess of the above sum being borne by the Commissioner. A.D. 1679-80.

“Allsoe the Merchants of Pegu having desired a Cowle or letter of promise of kind usuage to bring their rubies from Pegu to this Port, it is thought fit to gratifie them therein, and accordingly such a forme of a Cowle was read and passed and ordered to be translated into Portugez, allsoe into Persian, the Gentue and Mallabar languages sealed with the Companys seale and sent to divers places in severall copyes.”

COMMISSIONS and INSTRUCTIONS given by Streynsham Master, Esqre. Agent for the English Nation upon the coast of Chormandell and in the Bay of Bengale and Governour of Fort St. George Madrasspatam by and with the advice of his Councill unto Joan Perera de Faria Junior to treat with His Majesty the King of Barma and Pegu concerning Articles of Commerce to be obtained for the English Nation for the Settling a Trade in those countrys.

Having confidence in your ability, industry and integrity, in the managing of an affair of that importance, I doe herewith deliver you a Paper or draft of Articles of Commerce upon which I doe hereby empower you to treat with His Majesty the King of Burma and Pegu using your best endeavours to obtaine that the same may be granted by His said Majesty unto the English Nation for the settling ffactorys and a lasting trade within his Dominions and under his protection, which may Redound as much or more to the benefit of His Majesty and his Countrys then to the English themselves who seeke it, for there is noe nation with whom we trade but they find great advantage, satisfaction and content in our

* Serian is situated on one of the branches of the Irawaddy River a few miles N. E. from Rangoon. The Rangoon River is also called the Serian River vide Horsburgh's Directory.

A.D. 1679-80. Commerce and Conversation in soe much as that in all our ffactorys under this Agency upon the coast within the Kingdome of Gulcondah, and alsoe in all those in Orixá and Bengale under the Great Mogull we are not only free from paying all manner of customes and dutys (which is more than the Dutch can obtaine) upon our goods and marchandize as they pass in or out or to any parts within land, but alsoe from being obliged to present the said Kings with any presents or to send any Persons in the quality of Ambassadors or Agents to their Courts, and we doe enjoy many other great priviledges in these Countrys for the better and more easy carrying on of our trade and affairs, as that our goods are at noe place denied passage without being opened, examined or in the least hindered, our ships never looked into nor any question made to impede their departure, and many other such like priviledges as is very well knowne to all people, which we doe enjoy as freely in them parts as in this our owne Government, and it was the troubles we suffered under the Government in Pegu which caused us to Relinquish our Trade in that country heretofore, but now hoping to obtaine some better encouragement we offer at a new settlement, and if the King shall thinke fit to concede to what we propose he will certainly find advantage in it, if not we are still friends as we were before ;

The great business will be upon the prizes of the goods, that they may be at such moderate rates that we may be able to hold the trade, alsoe for Saltpetre, for liberty to make it and transport it, if that may be had cheap and we may be free to imploy the Natives to make it for us and to export it in such quantitys as we shall require it will much encourage us for supply of Ballast for our Europe ships, and for our King's want of it by reason of the great expence of Powder in his sea warrs with his neighbours. The next thing is how to supply mony or goods to pay for those goods we shall carry out of the Country, and the last and most needfull to continue our Commerce is such a freedome and liberty for our ffactorys and ships as may not discourage our people, for we have forsaken many profitable trades by reason of the inconveniencies that attend an over strickt and severe usage, which is altogether needless to the English who are a friendly and true People to what they promise as they have aproved themselves at all times, and upon the account that they are soe acceptable to all princes in those places where they have any trade their priviledges are greater than any other European Nation ; having Represented these things to his Majesty and his ministers as you shall find fit and convenient, I desire you to give me advice of your success therein, and of what further you shall find necessary in relation to this affair, and upon receipt thereof you shall receive a definitive answear from me, and soe

God keepe you, Dated in Fort St. George Madrasspatam the 23rd day of A.D. 1679-80.

Records the death of Cassa Verona of a malignant fever intestate; 30 guns were fired at his funeral, and a dispute arising as to whether his body should be burned by the Gentues or buried by the Moors, the latter having stopped the procession on the ground that deceased "was a Mussleman and built a Musseet [Musjid or Mosque] in the Towne to be buried in," the Governor with the advice of his Council sent order "that the body should be burned as a Gentue, and not buried by the Moors, it being apprehended to be of dangerous consequence to admit the Moors such pretences in the Towne."

NOTE.—Until the year 1752 the official year began on the 25th March. In 1751 by a Statute of George II. it was enacted that thenceforth the year should commence on 1st January; hence the year to which this Volume relates is designated 1679-80 until 25th March and 1680 from that date.

It is further recorded that Verona left an only child by his first A.D. 1679-80. wife, a daughter aged about 11 years and married, and that having no children by his second wife, who therefore "would have burnt with him, but y^e Governor would not suffer it," he adopted his elder brother's son. The death of Tymona's son also recorded.

* 'Benefit of Clergy' consisted of certain exemptions granted to the Church in criminal matters. The exemption of the persons of Clergymen from criminal process before the secular judge in certain cases was the original meaning of the term; but in course of time the 'Benefit of Clergy' was extended to every one who could read, a man possessed of this accomplishment being accounted a clerk and allowed the benefit of clerkship. As learning became more widely disseminated restrictions were imposed; learned laymen were not placed upon the same footing as the Clergy, but were subjected to a slight degree of punishment and were allowed to claim 'Benefit of Clergy' but once and in order to distinguish those to whom the privilege had been allowed, they were burnt with a hot iron in the brawn of the left thumb.—(Vide Blackstone's Commentaries.)

An offer to rent the Custome or Duty upon Fish for 10 Pagodas per annum accepted.

The Merchants sent for and pressed to hasten the Investment their excuse for delay being that their accounts had not been adjusted for several years.

At a Consultation Extraordinary.—It is resolved to send for all the Merchants and declare to them that, in consequence of the frequent difference in the adjustment of their accounts from the way they managed their business, the Council did determine to adopt the plan in force at Policat “that is to make a Joynt Stock of the Marchants to provide the whole Investment, to pay the Company’s monys thereupon as the goods came in, and to apoint seaven or more of the principall men amongst them to manadge the trade and to adjust their accounts every yeare.” The merchants promise to consider the proposition.

Pedda Vencatadry having absented himself from the Fort upon disgust that the business of the Investment is to be put into a new way which he and Allinga Pella [Pi'lai] have used all endeavours to frustrate, (for which the latter is by the Governour's order confined unto his house until this business be brought to effect,) it is resolved to send a message to him to the effect that it was determined that the Investments should be done by a company of merchants in Joint Stock, and that if he would come into the stock he should be the chief and have a quarter part of the whole, but that they neither feared nor cared what he did, and that the offer was only made out of friendship, to which he returned answer that he wholly submitted himself to the Council.

"There was also some Item [hint] given Pedda Venkatadry of a gold chain and medall sent out for Verona which would be given to him if he behaved himself well in this business."

* From the First Series of Extracts it appears that Mr. Mainwaring had superseded Mr. Mohun as Chief of the Factory at Masulipatam, the former having brought charges of private trading, &c. against the latter, whereupon countercharges were brought which led to the suspension of Mr. Mainwaring, and his return home to clear himself of the charges brought against him.
