The original manuscript is written in one volume, numbered 7 in the Madras record-room. It is not in a good state of preservation, and some of the pages in it are fast crumbling away.

When reference is made to the three parts of the series entitled 'Notes on and Extracts from the Government records in Fort St. George,' the abbreviated form 'N. and E., Vol. I, II or III', is used, and the volume published in 1893 is denoted as 'Madras Selections, 4th Series.' The present and succeeding volumes may hereafter be conveniently described as 'Madras Consultations,' the number of the series being added.

As I am unable to, correct the proof sheets of the notes and index, I fear that some errors must be expected. My absence from India must serve as an excuse for them with readers.

INTRODUCTION.

IN 1682 the current of events was setting in the direction of the west of India, and in consequence the consultations of Fort St. George contain few references to external affairs. As, however, the scattering of Sarabhoji's fleet and the rumour of Aurangzeb's preparations for a campaign had some bearing on the success of the attempts to establish trade to the south of Madras, and the politics in England some bearing on the competition of interlopers, it may be as well to bear in mind what was going on in India and what in London during that twelve-month.

At this time the ground-swell of the storms of 1683 and the years which succeeded it was beginning to make itself felt in the Dekhan. Aurangzeb was maturing his designs; but the hour for striking at Golconda and Bijapur was not yet come. Meanwhile his ¹ emissaries swarmed at Hyderabad and attempted in secret to detach from their allegiance to their sovereign those of Abul Husain's servants whom the detested administration of Madana Pant and his brother was daily alienating.

A cloud was gathering over the fortunes of Sambhaji. Bent on the ² reduction of Janjira, he had joined the besieging army in the spring, in the hope that his presence might encourage the soldiers. But the appearance of a large body of Mughal horse, descending the ghauts from Ahmadnagar, called him in another direction. The siege languished. An ³ attempt to end it by storming the island ended in disaster, and the Maratha force was withdrawn. Reprisals on the part of the Sidis followed, and in October the fleets of Sambhaji and the Abyssinian Chief ⁴ met and fought it out near Mazagon. The skilful tactics of Yaqut Khan were triumphant; four of the Maratha vessels were captured, others were sunk, and the leader of the navy, a deserter from the Sidi camp, was killed. At first Sambhaji was tempted to try and revenge himself on the English and Portuguese, to whose ⁵ policy of neutrality he was disposed to ascribe in large measure his ill success at Jinjira. His second thoughts were, however, wiser. He ⁵ heard that Aurangzeb was making vast preparations. His own ⁶ treasury was almost empty, and the marauding expeditions which, as conducted in the time of Sivaji, had brought in such rich spoils now no longer replenished it. With the English, at any rate, it was safer to keep on good terms. They might be useful allies in that coming struggle with the Mughal Sovereign, of which he now knew the hour was drawing near. He continued therefore to preserve friendly relations with the factors, and gave a hearing to the ⁷ complaints which on behalf of the government of Fort St. George they preferred against the vexatious and crushing duties that were making trade at Cuddalore and its neighbourhood almost impossible. Their representations were not immediately successful, but they paved the way for the removal of the imposts in question.

In England the contests of Whigs and Tories had a singular influence on the Indian trade. The vast gains of the company during the previous twenty years had of course excited the avarice of those persons who had no part in the monopoly, and who had seen the market price of East Indian stock rise from ⁸ seventy to three hundred. Before 1680 no serious attempt to compete with the company, strong in the possession of their royal charter, had been made. But in that year advantage was taken of the constitution of the court of directors to excite odium against them. The leading men of the committee of management happened to be Whigs, and the Tories spread abroad reports against the loyalty of the court as a body. These stories found ready acceptance with many in England and in India, and all who credited, or professed to credit them, threw their weight in the balance in opposition to the company. The party of private trade grew stronger every month, and more and more money was forthcoming to fit out interloping ships which might divert some portion of the golden stream from the chartered channels. Before long the vessels of the private traders were to be found in almost every port. The 'interloper' became as familiar a topic of conversation as the weather, and the very clerks grew weary with repeating the word. Sir Henry Yule in his researches⁹ discovered an instance in which a copyist, "after the constant writing on the subject of the pernicious violator of the Company's "privileges," actually made the court (anxious to obtain interpreters) request the governor at Fort St. George to send them "5 or 6 little "Native black boys which speak English (of which We understand that "there are many at the fort) that they may in time learne the Malay "language and become usefull as Interlopers" !

Before long the servants of the company learnt that if any one wished to stand in the good books of the court of directors, there was no surer passport to favour than ability to produce a record of zeal and activity in frustrating the designs of the interlopers. There are some indications in the present consultations that Gyfford and his colleagues, fearful perhaps of suspicion, were not unmindful of this. The relations of the agents and factors of this time to the party of interlopers are indeed somewhat perplexing. At bottom they were not altogether unlike those of the gamekeeper and poacher. "A keeper", said Charles Kingsley, "is only a poacher turned outside in, and a poacher a keeper turned inside out." So the servant of the company was often an interloper turned outside in, and an interloper a servant of the company turned inside out. Even where the desire to further the interests of the court was most sincere, there must have been some fellow-feeling. And where there was a strain of unscrupulousness, the transformations were as shifting as those of Harlequin. The interloper of yesterday became today the company's servant and the persecutor of other interlopers. The company's servant left office one week to take shares in an interloping venture the next. Captain Thomas Pitt accepted the governorship of Fort St. George. William Hedges¹⁰ chartered the Recovery. If William¹¹ Alley and Maurice Wynne had lived a few more years, the one might not have been¹² honoured by a polyglot epitaph in capital letters, and the other, in the rôle of some director-general of the company's affairs, might have made an even braver appearance than when he rowed up in his¹³ barge to Hoogley with attendant English mariners and musicians.

The establishment of factories ¹⁴ "to y^e southward in Seragee's country," and the doings of interlopers, were on several occasions in 1682 the subject of serious debate by the Council.

Factories in the South.—On the 12th January ¹⁵ Yale returned from his visit to Porto Novo and the neighbourhood. He brought with him "a Cowl from Hargee Raja the Subidar of Chengie upon the receipt of "wh^{ch} was fired 21 : guns, and 11 : guns for Mr. Elihu Yale for his good "services, & the success he had in y^e management of y^e business he "went about."

On the 11th May, ¹⁶ "the settlement of the Factory at Codalour" was taken into consideration, and Robert Freeman, previously recalled for the purpose from Masulipatam, was appointed chief, with two members of council and a secretary to assist him. A reference subsequently made to Freeman's ¹⁷ detention at Madras shows that he cannot have proceeded to his charge until July. On the 24th of that month ¹⁸ orders were given to the warehousekeeper "forthwith to lade those goods" that were intended for the new factory, and on the ¹⁹ 26th and 31st "Gen^ls" to "y^e Chiefe and Councill of Codalour" were read and passed. On the ²⁰ 18th August, a "Gen^l" was received "from Codalour" and on the ²¹ 5th September another. But the vessel which brought the second letter brought ²¹ also the chief and council of the factory. It may be presumed that they had left the property of the company in charge of the writer. The consultations are provokingly silent as to the precise reason of this sudden return of Freeman and his colleagues. There was ²² some "great disappointment," and "the great charge" which the company had "been at towards the settlement" of the factory was considered to have been "all lost." Six days after Freeman's arrival at Fort St. George it was ²³ resolved to put on shore the goods and treasure which had been on the point of despatch to Codalour. The ²⁴ presence of, "an able pson to compose, manage and settle" the embroilment, whatever it was, appeared essential, but unfortunately at this juncture the sudden death of the Chief at Masulipatam made it necessary to send Freeman to supply the vacancy there.

Meanwhile the ²⁵ Subahdar at Conimero or Conimeer, as Kunimedu was by turns called, had been giving "very friendly and advantageous

"proffers concerning" the settlement of the English "in his Govern't," and Gyfford and his colleagues, in some despair, it would seem, at the "great tonnage" ²⁵ required by the court of directors, hastily resolved on ²⁶ establishing a factory there. John Willeox, their secretary, was made Chief, and Richard Milton, one of the late Council at Codalour, and Ralph Ord, were appointed as accountant and warehousekeeper. ²⁶ A week afterwards it was resolved "that orders and Instructions for Conimeer ffactory be in a readinesse for the ffactors appointed for that place within two or three days, & that Mr. Richard Browne doe deliver an Acco^t of the Remaines of Codalour to the said ffactors of Conimeer." In another week's time "Orders and Instructions" for the new factory were ²⁷ duly "read and past in Councell," and the factors, ²⁸ detained at Fort St. George "by reason of the bad weather," were directed to depart on the 25th October. Three weeks later, the ²⁹ receipt of "a Gen^l from the Cheife and Councell at Conimeer" shows that John Willeox and his colleagues had entered upon their duties. On the 4th December ³⁰ five thousand pagodas were sent to meet expenses, and at the last consultation of the year it was ³¹ ordered that a boat should be despatched to Conimeer "with packing stuff &c^a. provisions they haveing great occasion for them."

Interlopers.—On the 17th July ³² the Resolution anchored in the Madras roads, and Mr. John Littleton and Mr. Slaughter Lee "came ashore" with a letter "from y^e Captain intimating that 'twas the "Comp^{as} order that 2 : of y^e Councell should repair on board ship." In "compliance therto Mr. Tim^e Wilkes & Mr. John Bigrig went, & a small time after returning again brought with them y^e Hon^{ble} "Comp^{as} paquet & other lres : sealed up in a bag w^{ch} were immediately "opened & the Hon^{ble} Comp^{as} lre : to [y^e] Fort perused and finding in "y^e 2^d Paragraph y^e Comp^{as} positive order concerning Mr. Bridger, he "was acquainted with it & the charge against him, to y^e first he quietly "submitted, to y^e last he confessed that he did send Diamonds & "pearles to England, but as to y^e businesse of Interloping Alley "he avowed he was wholly innocent." The court, it appears, had certain evidence that Bridger was in ³³ correspondence with Captain William Alley; and Alley's name was never heard or mentioned by the directors without a sudden access of acerbity. They were resolved, they ³⁴ wrote, that no man should abide in their service who was directly or indirectly guilty of dealings with him.

On the ³⁵ 1st August agent Gyfford received orders to "hinder & defeat any Interlopers" that should come to the Gingerley coast, and on the 13th September an opportunity of displaying zeal in executing the wishes of the directors presented itself. An interloping ship,³⁶ calling herself now the William Hall, now the James Foster put into the ³⁷ bay of Tuticorin. Word was sent to Gyfford. The members of the Fort St. George council were hurriedly summoned to an ³⁸ extraordinary consultation, and on the ³⁹ following morning two servants of the company left with instructions to ⁴⁰ see what the strange ship might be, and if the report that she was an interloper should prove to be true, to "impede & obstruct" the unwelcome visitor "in allways possible." They carried with them five hundred pagodas, to be spent in bribing the men on board the interloper to leave their ship. Promises of preferment to such as would come to Fort St. George and serve there were to be liberally made; and nothing was to be left undone to disable the adventurer. The mission was fruitless, as on reaching Tuticorin Captain Bett and his companion ⁴¹ found that the interloper had sailed "for Bengall being consigned to the late Cheife or some other Englishman there." It was therefore only left to Gyfford and his council to place on ⁴² record a fervent eulogium on the "diligence and care . . . the trouble and great frugalitie" shown and endured by Bett and Fleetwood, and to present each of them with "2½ y^{ds} of Searlet Cloth and half a piece of Norwich Stuffs."

Composition of the Fort St. George council.—William Gyfford continued to hold the position of president in the council of Fort St. George. On Bridger's dismissal, the vacancy was filled by ⁴³ John Littleton, and ⁴⁴ on the appointment of John Willecox to the chiefship of the new factory at Comimere Henry Mose took up the duties of secretary.

Minor events.—On the 9th February the *George*⁴² set sail, carrying home the late agent and governor, Streynsham Master. His career in India had shown him to be possessed of great independence of character and high courage. He had saved the factory at Surat from the Marathas in 1670, receiving from the company in memory of his bravery a gold⁴³ medal inscribed Pro meritis contra Sevageum apud Suratt, 1670; and for many years had enjoyed the confidence of the directors. The question of the charges brought against him by his enemies has been⁴⁴ discussed elsewhere. Before he sailed, the disputes between him and the government of his successor were settled by compromise. Master⁴⁵ agreed to repay a sum overdrawn on account of salary and gratuity. The Madras council consented to⁴⁶ refer to England for decision by the committee of management the subject of the claims made by the merchants. One charge was left for⁴⁶ adjudication by the civil courts,

On the 13th November the⁴⁷ custom of shipping off "this Countrey People and making them slaves in other Strange Countreys" was taken into "serious Consideration," and pains and penalties were threatened against any inhabitant of the town who should be convicted of such practices.

On the 14th December, the long-standing connection between Fort St. George and the 'Bay' ceased to exist, and it was⁴⁸ resolved that the "Bay Acco^t be clear'd off by Acco^t Currant in regard that the "Company has now ordered that place to be an Agency and to be noe "longer dependent to this place."

Local and domestic incidents.—In July the sea "having⁴⁹ imbayed "itself just upon the middle of the town" was found to have "eaten "away below the very⁵⁰ foundation," and drums were beaten "to call "all Cooleys, Carpenters, Smiths, Peons and all other workmen" that they might "work day and night, to endeavour to put a stop to its "fury." Yet "nothing could avail against its violence," and part of a⁵¹ battery built by Sir William Langhorn fell down.

Order'd that y^e Warehousekeeper doe land the 2 : Chests of Corall formerly sent to Metchp^m & likewise 1868 : bags Saltpetre out of y^e Golden Fleece, soe there will be remaining 3000 : bags on board her, & when they are ashoare, then that y^e warehousekeeper doe forthwith lade on her what bales of Callicos shall be thought convenient, & in regard shee brought nothing but Saltpetre from y^e Bay, & Course goods from Madapollam, & Cap^t James Cook makeing complaints thereof to y^e Agent & Councell, 'tis resolved that most fine goods be laden upon him to compleat his tonnage.

M^r Master having formerly, upon his difference with Pedda Vencatadry &c^a after their imprisonment, order'd them to pay whole custome, w^{ch} they, nor Verona did ever before, it being a priviledge granted them of many years to pay but half custome, they humbly petitioned the Govern^r and Councell, that they may pay noe more than they did before, Viz^t half Custome, the Agent &c^a taking their petitions into consideration & duly weighing, that if they are forced to pay whole Custome they must make the Comp^a pay soe much more for their cloth, or bring it in worse than ⁴muster, & besides if they are lessened in their Esteem here, they will be undervalued by the Govern^{rs} of the Countreys, where they provide the cloth, & they will be forced by them to pay whole Custome as they doe here, & soe be much impeded in their businesse the Govern^r &c^a here having maturely weighed and examin'd all circumstances & the reasons aforementioned, have resolved to grant their desire. Their petition goes home at the end of the Fort Consultation book.

The Councell having had many debates about the 41: Paragraph of the Hon^{ble} Comp^{as} lre: concerning the Diamond trade, & of the disposall of their stock, w^{ch} should be remaining after the ships were gone, have thought it convenient, and most for y^e Hon^{ble} Comp^{as} interest, to invest it in Diamonds: for then Diamonds will bee much cheaper, there will be noe buyers at the Mines, & then the Comp^a will have the choice of that Commodity intirely to themselves, these Considerations with many arguments & debates, & they thinking it without any private ends to be wholly the Comp^{as} advantage, & the genuine sense of the 41: paragraph of the Comp^{as} lre: have resolved to invest that stock as abovesaid.

Whereas y^e Hon^{ble} Comp^a notwithstanding y^e reason given them in a lre: from y^e Fort, doe order the ships [to] be despatched from y^e Coast in time w^{ch} (as wee understand) is y^e 20th Jan^{ry} as in y^e Chart[er par]tys, yet y^e George arri[ved] here but to day, & wee judging it most for y^e Hon^{ble} [Comp^{as}] service, that both y^e [] & Bengall Merch^t when [they] arrive doe [stop until we h]ave taken in all their [. y^e]. Agent and Councell after serious consultation by virtue of the powers given to us in y^e 105: section of y^e Hon^{ble} Comp^{as} lre: dated y^e 12: Dec^{br} 1677: concerning the dispatch of their ships have resolved, that y^e George, and the other ships when they come shall remain in this roade, until all or see many as they can taken in of y^e goods provided here for y^e Hon^{ble} Comp^{as} acco^t for England, be laden aboard them.

In y^e morning Cap^t Earning fired his guns coming to an anchor about 3: in y^e morning, having been but 13: dayes in y^e voyage from y^e Bay, & about 8: came ash[oare], and brought with him a Gen^l from y^e Cheife &^{ca} at ¹⁰ Ballasor[e] with their books of acco^{ts} for England & Copies for y^e Fort.

Order'd that y^e warehousekeeper doe land y^e provisions for y^e Hon^{ble} Comp^{as} acco^t upon y^e George, and likewise 896: bales of Saltpetre.

An order of this date was deliver'd to Cap^t Earning to caution him not to receive any Dyamonds, Diamond bort or Synall aboard his ship.

Mr. Dixon was order'd to goe aboard y^e George to survey her and to see how many bales of Callicoes shee can take in to compleat her tonnage.

[Order'd] that M^r Tim^o Wilkes Warehousekeeper [.] goods upon y^e George, & upon the acco^t [.] Bales of Callicoes, & satisfying us that it would be time lost to take out y^e Saltpetre, it being very late, notwithstanding the aforesaid order, 'tis now resolved that the Saltpetre remain aboard him.

Order'd that M^r John Nicks doe goe aboard [e . . . y^e] ships, & take a muster of each ship & make report the [reef to y^e] Govern^r & Councell.

M^r Master being demanded to repay back what he overpaid himself on acco^t of his Salary & gratuity made answer if the Govern^r & Councell would not give him an order to imbarke himself for England, rather than stay in the Countrey he would repay it, upon w^{ch} 'tis resolv'd & order'd that noe order be given him til he makes the said payment.

The Comp^{as} Merch^{ts} desiring 200 : Candy of Lead it was sold them at the former price, they refusing to give more, therefore the Warehousekeeper was order'd to weigh it off & deliver it to them; & they to make payment at the same time with y^e other.

M^r John Nicks and John Willecox Sec^{try} were sent to M^r Master to read to him this following paper, viz^t.

Whereas you desir'd an order to imbarque yourself upon the ship George for England it would be readily granted you provided you first pay the Comp^{as} demands upon you for w^h you overpaid yourself on acco^t of your Salary & gratuity with the Interest thereof to this time & that you give answer to

When it was read his answer was he would come to the Govern^r & Couucell & give his answer personally before them about eleven a clock, w^{ch} he did, but time being short y^e Councell only proceeded upon his overpaying himself his Salary & gratuity, to w^{ch} he gave this following answer, after y^e Agent & Councell represented the case home to him that the Comp^{as} orders were positive & he must pay it, he then seeing there was noe remedy did promise to comply.

Order'd that the Warehousekeeper Mr. Tim^o Wilkes doe lade with all expedition the Callicos & bale goods on board the Cesar to compleat her lading.

The Govern^r & Councell took into farther examination the businesse relating to M^r Master & the Merch^{ts} and the said M^r Master being examin'd upon an acco^t drawn up by the Merch^{ts} his answers were as follo^a viz^t:

As to y^e businesse of the ¹¹ Tandour he affirmed that he had a part thereof promised by Verona before his death, but, being farther pressed about it, answer'd it was impossible a man should give particular acco^{ts} of things soe long passed.

Pedda Veneatadry, Allingall & Teagapa being examin'd if Verona did make a promise of part of the ship Tandour or her freight to M^r Master, they deposed that they never knew or heard of any such thing or promise, & M^r Bridger and M^r Wilkes both members of Councell then, declared that they ever thought the ship Tandour to belong to Verona and not any part to M^r Master. Pedda Veneatadry offers to make oath that he never told M^r Master that Verona cheated him of pag^{os} 500 :

Being examin'd about the pag^{os} 11000 : w^{ch} Pedda Veneatadry passed a receipt to him for but never rec^d it, he answer'd that it was paid to his order, & if an oath were administred to him, he would confirm the truth therof by the same before the Govern^r & Councell.

Allingall Pilla's charge being read to him for the pag^{os} 5000 : he forcibly took from him he made this answer, that Allingall Pilla coming to him declared he knew a way to get money that might be very advantagious to him, & that if he would be assisting to y^e design he would give him pag^{os} 5000 : the businesse was to cheat the Comp^a as M^r Master sayes, yet notwithstanding he did take the money upon that acco^t, but Allingall who stood by ans^d the money was forced from him to save his life : for then he was in prison, & kept from Victualls for 2 : dayes together & said that M^r Master threatned him he would bury his bones with in the ffort walls, these menaces made him use all y^e interest in the world to preserve his life, soe at last he was forced to comply with M^r Master his unjust demands & to pay him the pag^{os} 5000 : for w^{ch} to this day he pays interest, but if M^r Master did make such an unjust promise for the lucre of the money, then upon non performance of the bargain (for M^r Master declared tha Allingall did not cheat y^e Comp^a) the money ought to be repaid again, but this he detains under a pretence that he will refer it to the Comp^a because he glosses it over with a fair & specious shew of wrong to y^e Comp^a.

There being great necessity for y^e building a new ¹⁷ Godown to sort y^e Hon^{ble} Comp^{as} cloth in, because there may be sev^l frauds and cheats put upon them by sorting and keeping it in that w^{ch} was called Verona's where the Merch^{ts} keep their own people who are alwaies watching to chop & change the cloth & put that of a lower number into y^e place of a higher after 'tis sorted 'tis therefore concluded upon as being much for the Comp^{as} interest to build a new warehouse where their cloth may be better secured from such cheating practises, another reason is this warehouse is too small to contain the cloth after 'tis sorted, & the cloth of one number lying soe close by that of another the peices may be easily intermixed, w^{ch} is the only reason that the cloth appears soe ill sorted in England & seeing the Comp^a doe intend mightily to enlarge their stock there will not be half room enough, these things being duly considered a new warehouse was order'd to be built. 'tis likewise concluded upon to build a new powder house the other being sold with y^e ground of the old garden.

Bramine Lingapa having by l^{tes} & other indirect meanes prevail'd with Bramine Accana to order the payment of their towns rent to him, contrary to our Cowl &¹⁹ Salabod and considering a President of this nature would bring the Comp^{as} businesse into endlesse disorders & confusion, Lingapa being of such a turbulent spirit and perpetually inroaching upon our priviledges, 'tis thought convenient & much for the Comp^{as} interest to prevent this design w^{ch} may be soe prejudiciall in the event, by sending up to Accana a small present to the value of pag^{os} 150 : as a means for him to retract his former order & pag^{os} 50 to y^e great men about him to engage them to afford us their Freindly assistance in this affair and pag^{os} 5 : to Madana's son as accustomed, he being newly made a Bramine.

The Comp^{as} Dubasse & Bramine at Madap^{lm} coming to y^e Fort by our order, declared they had a power given them from y^e Merch^{ts} there to treat with y^e Agent & c^a about an abatement upon the Course & fine goods, the Govern^r & c^a therefore having discourst them could bring them to noe other termes than 4 : p cent upon the Course and 1 p cent abatement upon the fine goods, but one Gruapa a pson reputed at Madap^{lm} to be one of great dealings
 & a money'd man sent up two psons to y^e Fort to negotiate likewise with y^e Agent & Councell & he gave them a Commission to abate 1 : p Cent more than what should be proffer'd by the Dubasse & Bramine in behalf of the Madap^{lm} Merch^{ts} these psons therefore coming before the Govern^r & c^a made a proffer to abate 5 : p Cent upon the Course & 2 : p Cent upon the fine goods & these things being taken into consideration the Dubasse

& Bramine were sent for & told what these two psons did proffer in behalf of Gruapa and were very much pressed to come to y^e same abatement, to w^{ch} they replied they were the Comp^{as} servants and only imploy'd by the Merch^{ts} & could not goe beyond their Commission, but at last they yeilded to y^e same abatement, 'twas therefore after mature consideration (both parties being sent out) order'd that the Madap^{lm} Merchants & Gruapa and his Comp^a should be joyn'd together in the contract for the Investment, if such an accord could be made between them for tho: Gruapa & Co^a did first proffer 1: p cent abatement upon the Course & 1: p cent upon y^e fine goods more than y^e Dubasse & Bramine yet y^e Madap^{lm} Merch^{ts} being old serv^{ts} to the Comp^a & alwaies very punctuall & being now willing to make the same abatement, 'twas therefore thought most convenient to joyne Gruapa & them together, they have also engaged to abate 10: p cent upon y^e Goleondah Bettelas to take off 5000: pag^{os} of Europe goods this year and pag^{os} 10000: y^e next year & to endeavour to bring the Merch^{ts} to 8: p Cent upon w^t money shall be deliver'd them beforehand. Gruapa & Co^a to have $\frac{1}{2}$ part and the whole divided in 10: shares, the Agent & Co^a therefore order'd that pag^{os} 25000: be sent to Madap^{lm} with an order to y^e Cheife & Co^a there to accommodate this businesse between these two parties if possible, but if y^e Madap^{lm} Merch^{ts} would not be brought to an accommodation, nor would be joyned with Gruapa & Co^a for y^e management of y^e Comp^{as} Investments then that Gruapa and his Comp^a be intrusted with the providing y^e Comp^{as} cloth they being psons very responsible & will give any security that shall be requir'd.

The Agent & c^a upon the advice of Mr Vincent Sayon's death, affairs being very pressing & time short, immediatly proceeded upon the choice of another Cheife, & tho: the Comp^{as} affairs at Codalour, considering what posture they are in at present, require an able p^{son} to compose, manage and settle them, yet the urgency of businesse at Metchp^m requiring a speedy settlement, 'twas resolved that Mr Rob: Freeman proceed as Cheife there he being very well acquainted with those parts.

There being great number of slaves yearly exported from this place, to y^e great greivance of many p^{sons} whose Children are very commonly privately stollen away from them, by those who are constant traders in this way, the Agent & c^a considering the Scandall that might accrue to y^e Government, & the great losse that many parents may undergoe by such actions, have order'd that noe more Slaves be sent off the shoare again.

Mr John Davis being sent for up before the Agent & c^a was acquainted with his imployment of being 2^d of Madap^lm, & order'd to prepare to be going down upon the Resolution, to w^{ch} h[eg]ave for answer that he was innocent of those crimes laid to his charge, & that he had not merited the being put by his imp^lyment of being Cheife of Madap^{lm} the Agent &c^a gave him for answer, that they were not now to discourse him about pticulars, but that in Gen^l they had sufficient grounds & reasons for what they did, and if he would have but a little patience, he should have a fair tryall, & soe advised him to submit for the present for should he remain obstinate & refuse their Commands he would ipso facto turn himself out of the Comp^{as} service, but y^e Agent &c^a seeing him something irresolute gave him the liberty til next Thursday to consider farther of it.

Mr Ralph Ord having given in a Petition to y^e Agent & C^a to be readmitted into y^e Comp^{as} service in their Mercantile affairs, 'twas taken into Consideration, and finding his request to be very reasonable & modest, they have granted his request & have admitted him to serve in the quality of a Factor, but as Probationall til the Hon^{ble} Comp^a had pleased otherwise to order it, but first they had these considerations, that he as being Schoolmaster had a very large Salary, more than double of what he has now, & that they could find a person very fitting to keep School at easy wages in respect of what the Comp^a allow'd, soe that both their Salaries together will hardly amo^t to more than what M^r Ord had before, soe that the Hon^{ble} Comp^a for the same pay has two servants when they had but one before, besides businesse in all places mightily increasing, & but few hands to goe through with it, & likewise the great want of able men to serve in our new settled Factorys, upon w^{ch} forgoing acco^{ts} the Agent & C^a have admitted him but as probationall as is before specified.

Mr John Nicks, Mr John Littleton, John Willecox, Mr Jn^o Stables, & Mr Henry Alford were sent to Mr Bridger's house, to bring away what papers, books, &^{ca} should be found there, when they came to y^e house they found the seals all whole as when first put on, all papers were promiscuously put into a bag together, least for fear any paper of concern might escape but noe books could be found, w^{ch} done they were all brought to y^e Fort, & the Comp^a & Mr Nicks his seales put to y^e bag, the reason why these papers were continued soe long at Mr Bridger's house, was because he had made a request to y^e Agent &^{ca} that they might remain in his house sealed up some small time he hoping as he said he might receive some better newes out of England by the following ships, but now the ships being all come & gone & his expectations disappointed, the Agent &^{ca} as before sent for his papers &^{ca} to y^e Fort where they now remaine.

A parcell of Musters of ours and Conimeer.

It is also thought fit that a small gratuitie be made to M^r Bett and M^r fleetwood for the diligence and care they have shewed in their Journey to Tutticoree and the trouble and great frugalitie they have had therein and also encourage others for the future upon the like occasion to undertake it chearfully, zealously & faithfully to serve the hon^{ble} Company with their best endeavours, and being also the hon^{ble} Companys order to encourage such It is therefore Resolved that $2\frac{1}{2}$ yds of Scarlet Cloth and half a piece of ⁵⁴ Norwich Stuffs be given to each of them.

Resolved that orders be given to the Cheife & Councell at Metchlepatam that they sell not their Broad cloth under such rates and prices hereafter mentioned they advising us that at present they can get but 22 Pag^{os} p^r peice which wee would not have them sell under 23 Pag^{os} nor so cheap unless for some considerable parcell together But for small quantities 24 & 25 pag^{os} p^r peice by reason wee have sold all ours and in a little time it is probable the price may be raised and wee having no extraordinary occasion for money think fitt to deferr the sale of the said Cloth a little longer unless the aforesaid rates are complied with.

Madana the Cheife Minister of State under the King of Golcondah sent to us to procure some Gold Chaines to the value of 400 Pago^s (his son being about to be married) for which he promised to pay, But by reason of his Grandure and the Considerable advantage wee may reap for the Hono^{ble} Company by obligeing him It is agreed that a present to the value of 150 Pago^s be made him in Gold Chaines instead of the 400 Pago^s which wee are apt to beleive wee should never have been paid for them.

Mr John Davis delivered in a parcell of Books and Papers of Mr John Clark's deceased at Madapollam and sealed them up with his owne Seale.

Our People at Metchlepatam acquainting us of their great want of assistants for the dispatch of the Investment this yeare and upon the remove of Mr Timothy Harris to Pettipollee to be second there in the room of Mr Slaughter Lee deceased It is ordered that Mr Richard Gresham whom wee judge to have skill in Cloth by reason he served some time with a Linnen Draper doe goe third and Mr Robert Bowyer fourth to Metchlepatam to supply those places.

WHEREAS the Governour had granted a warrant to Mr John Davis to arrest Wallishee Chitty one of the Companys Merchants and likewise another warrant from the Justice to Summon a Jury, It is now ordered not to proceed upon the same in regard the rest of the Creditors had attach'd said Wallishee Chittee his estate and entred there petition in the Choultrey whereof said Mr Davis was one himself before the said warrant was granted which was unknown to the Governour, And also because this said Wallishee Chittee hath been a man of reputation and all along one of the Companys ancient Merchants and hath lost his Estate not by any ill husbandry but by meer misfortune of the warrs at Bantam and wee would not therefore have him utterly ruined but as the rest of the Creditors are willing to take $\frac{1}{3}$ part of theire debt in hand $\frac{1}{3}$ at 12 mo: and $\frac{1}{3}$ at two 12 months. Wee think it but mercy and Justice that the said Mr Davis should be obliged to Comply wth the rest of the Creditors according as the Chancery of England doth provide in such cases which he hath been offered, but refuseth, Againe wee say if wee should proceed to a verdict for him he ought to pay it back to be divided between himself and the rest of the Creditors for that before the arrest Mr Davis knew hee had lost his estate at Bantam by the aforesaid warrs for which he likewise absented himself from his Creditors soe that he was in reallity a bankrupt person though the Creditors here have not the oppertunitie to sue out a Statute for itt for want of Commissioner to that purpose, therefore Wee being here to doe justice to all persons though wee can't proceed in the form of the Law being in a forreign Plantation & wanting what is requisite to it, wee have thought fitt being but equall and just that all the Creditors of this said Wallishee Chitty should fare alike and that the said Mr Davis should Comply with the rest of them wherby not to give matter of Complaint to the Natives as also for encouragement of all honest Merchants.

The Councell having by order of the Hon^{ble} Company secured a summe of money of M^r John Bridger wee doe now upon his request release the said summe of [. . .] to supply his present occasions here and to furnish himself and family for their Voyage to England he solemnly declaring his necessitie for the same his estate being abroad at present.

Whereas there was the summe of 61 Pag : 8 fanams found in the Companys Cash Chest at the Present Agents arrivall over and above the ballance of the Companys of the Company's Cash received from Agent Masters and not any where brought to Account and there being a note found in the Bagg directing the use of itt towards the building a publique Gate to the North side of the out Towne for a conveniencie for watchmen to attend the Companys Customes to prevent the stealing thereof (for which there is great necessity) It is accordingly ordered that the said summe of money be put to the use which originally it was design'd for.

In regard that our present occasion doth cause us to remove Mr Robert Bowyer from his place of steward of the ffort to be fourth of Metchlepatam and there being no flatter or other Covenant Servant of the Hon^{ble} Companys to supply his place It is thought fitt at present to put Mr John Inch into the said place he being a Sober and trusty man to manage that buisness And in consideration of his doeing his former office besides It is agreed to raise his Sallary to 5 pago^s p mensem.

M94 NOTES

¹ [page 2]. George White.—A person bearing this name was of some consequence among the interlopers (private traders) of the 17th c. He was associated with Pitt, afterwards governor of Fort St. George, in the venture of the ships Edward and Henry, which were bought up by the Court in 1694 with the object of absorbing the interloping party; and his name is mentioned in the grant of arms to the 'New' company, bearing date 5th September, 1698 [Sir George Birdwood's Report on the miscellaneous old records at the India Office, 1890, p. 19, foot-note.]

² [page 2]. Mr. Cholmley.—cf. Madras Selections, 4th series, p. 60. Nathaniel Cholmley was the company's agent in the diamond trade at Golconda. In July 1679 [consultations dated 7th idem] he received orders to return to England at once, but objected on the ground that the notice was "so short as to savour of malice." I conjecture him to have been the same Nathaniel Cholmley who married [Burke's extinct baronetage, 1844,] Mary, only daughter and heir of Sir Hugh Cholmley, baronet, of Whitby. The name Nathaniel was for some generations preserved in the family.

³ [page 2]. Mr. Mainwaring.—Mathew Mainwaring displaced Richard Mohun [cf. note 22 in Madras Selections, 4th series, p. 64] in the office of chief at Masulipatam in June 1675 [N. and E. Vol. I, p. 34], but Mohun in his turn so far made good charges of loose living and dishonesty on the part of Mainwaring that the latter was himself suspended. In November 1678 the government of Streyndham Master refused to modify this sentence, and directed the provision of a passage to England for Mainwaring [cf. pp. 95 and 96 of the same volume]. He landed at Madras on 2nd July 1680, and by a curious coincidence his enemy, Mohun, then on the council of Fort St. George, was on the same day finally dismissed from the service of the company. Three days afterwards Mainwaring was granted leave of absence. An allusion is made to his death in the consultations of 28th December [p. 100 of this volume], but the place and date of it are not on record. He must apparently have died in India.

⁶ [page 3]. Porto Novo.—Yule and Burnell [Hobson-Jobson, s.v.] were disposed to think that the name was intended to mean New Oporto.

⁷ [page 4]. Richard Portman.—Arrived in India on 7th June 1676 in the degree of chaplain, succeeding Mr. Warner in that office. He was one of two persons into whose hands Streynsham Master and other subscribers to the fund for building St. Mary's Church in Fort St. George bound themselves to pay their contributions [Hakl. Soc., Vol. LXXV, p. cxxlii and Master papers]. He dedicated that structure on 28th October 1680 in virtue of a commission from the bishop of London [N. and E., Vol. III, p. 37]. A chaplain's pay was at this time £100.

¹⁰ [page 8]. Ballasore [Bālāsvara].—On the Orissa coast. A factory was established there in 1642.

¹¹ [page 9]. Gunny [Mahr. gont].—Sacking.

¹² [page 10]. Mr. Vincent.—Mathias Vincent was for some time chief of the Hoogley factory. In the letter of instructions given to William Hedges, the court required him to seize with all possible speed upon the person of Vincent and send him forthwith a prisoner on board the ship Defence, to "remain under safeguard in charge of the Captain, "having all convenient accommodations, but no permission to return on "Shore in India, upon any pretence or cause whatsoever untill he be landed "in England to the end he may be brought within the reach of his "Majesties laws to answer to the severall breaches of his trust "and other notorious abuses committed by him" [Hakl. Soc., Vol. LXXV,

p. xv]. Vincent's character does not seem to have been good; it is certain that he had dealings with interlopers, and the accusation of unfaithfulness to his masters was probably just. A stranger charge—that of witchcraft—was, however, launched at him by the distracted John Thomas—cf. Madras Selections, 4th series, p. 7—who alleged that Vincent had “practised Diabolical arts with the Bramines and others on the Bay for bewitching” him. The directors, headed by Sir Josiah Child, believed or professed to believe this rampant stuff, and instructed the agent and company to “prevent and avoid . . . Vincent exercising charms or using poyson by securing him a safe custody from conversing with any of the said Witches or other Natives, and return a true account of all the said Vincent's barbarities and other cruelties to . . . Thomas” [Hakl. Soc., Vol. LXXV, p. cclxxxiv]. If Vincent took home much of the mammon of unrighteousness, as his enemies alleged, he doubtless made good use of it, for he received the honour of knighthood within two years of his departure from India in the interloping Ship the Crown.

¹⁴ [page 10]. Tandour.—The name of this ship was probably taken from Tandur, a hamlet in the Tondiarpet division of Madras.

¹⁵ [page 14]. Thomas Lucas.—Afterwards in the council of Fort St. George, and then chief at Madapollam [Madras consultations dated 15th November, 1683].

¹⁶ [page 16]. Sir Josiah Child.—At this time governor of the company. The dictionary of National Biography and Hakluyt Society's Volume LXXV contain biographies of Sir Josiah Child, who in the opinion of Sir Henry Yule gave utterance at times to “large views and flashes of ambitious prevision.” A still more eminent writer has given a vivid picture of Child. “There were those,” writes Macaulay, “who . . . remembered him an apprentice, sweeping out one of the counting houses of the City. But from a humble position his abilities had raised him rapidly to opulence, power and fame. Before the Restoration he was highly considered in the mercantile world. Soon after that event he published his thoughts on the philosophy of trade. His speculations were not always sound: but they were the speculations of an ingenious and reflecting man. Into whatever errors he may occasionally have fallen as a

"theorist, it is certain that, as a practical man of business, he had few equals. Almost as soon as he became a member of the committee which directed the affairs of the Company, his ascendancy was felt. Soon many of the most important posts, both in Leadenhall Street and in the factories of Bombay and Bengal, were filled by his kinsmen and creatures. His riches, though expended with ostentatious profusion, continued to increase and multiply. He obtained a baronetcy: he purchased a stately seat at Wanstead; and there he laid out immense sums in excavating fish-ponds, and in planting whole square miles of barren land with walnut trees. He married his daughter to the eldest son of the Duke of Beaufort, and paid down with her a portion of fifty thousand pounds." [History of England, Chapter XVIII].

¹⁹ [page 19]. Salahod.—Perpetual. A hybrid from the Persian sāl and the Arabic abād. Here used in the sense of prescriptive custom.

²⁵ [page 39]. Serash wins.—Serash appears to be some miswriting or corruption.

²⁷ [page 40]. Corge.—A score, and, by extension, a packet containing twenty pieces. From the Portuguese corja, which was itself however borrowed from India. cf. Hobson-Jobson, s.v., pp. 197 and 733.

³⁰ [page 45]. Ye orders made by Mr. Master.—cf. N. and E., Vol. II, p. 66.

"Fryer's Map (1698, but illustrating 1672-73)," Yule proceeds, "represents the Governor's House as a building of Mahomedan architecture, 'with a dome. This may have been the Madrasa itself.' Reference is finally made to Charles Lockyer who in 1711 'speaks of a 'College' of 'which the building was 'very ancient'; formerly a hospital, and then 'used apparently as a residence for young writers.' But it is 'not clear,' Yule adds, "whether the name 'College' was not given to it on this account."

Sir Henry Yule's opinions must at all times command the greatest respect, and it cannot yet be said that his conclusion in the present case is untenable. It is possible however that he would not have spoken with the same degree of confidence if he had discovered earlier instances of the use of the name than these which are appended to his article. There are moreover some defects in the chain of argument which it may be as well to state, in the hope that the difficulty may be sooner elucidated if misapprehensions are removed. The earliest of Yule's quotations bears date 1653, or about thirteen years from the establishment of the factory at Madras. On the assumption that the term 'Madraspatam' came into use some years after the plot of land acquired by Francis Day had been fortified, the theory that it was borrowed through the medium of the Portuguese is probable enough. But as a matter of fact the name—in the form Madrazpatam—is of earlier origin: it is employed by the president and council of Surat in a letter addressed to the company on 29th December, 1640 [I.O. Records, O.C. No. 1764]; and the context makes it pretty certain that Francis Day or some other of the factors at the new Settlement must have previously made use of it in reference to the place or "rather," as the Surat letter says, "plot of ground" offered to him. It is no doubt just possible that in the course of the negotiations Day heard and caught up the name from the Portuguese, who were at the time in friendly relations with the English; but the probabilities are certainly in the opposite direction. The nayak from whom the plot was obtained must almost certainly have supplied the name, or what Francis Day conceived to be the name, of it. Again as regards Hamilton's mention of a "college," Sir Henry Yule's remark certainly goes too far. Hamilton writes "There is a very Good Hospital in the 'Town, and the Company's Horse-stables are neat, but the old College, 'where a great many Gentlemen Factors are obliged to lodge, is ill-kept 'in Repair.'" [A new account of the East Indies, Edit. 1744, Vol. I, p. 363]. This remark, taken together with that made by Lockyer and quoted above, affords proof, indeed, that there was a building known to the English as the 'College.' But it does not follow that this, or any, building was distinctively known to Musulmans as the 'madrasa.' The "old College" of Hamilton may have been the successor of a Musulman 'madrasa' of some size and consequence, and if this was so the argument for the derivation would be strengthened. It is however equally possible that some old building within the plot of territory acquired by Day which had never been a 'madrasa' was turned to use as a College or place where the young writers should live and receive instruction; and in this case the argument so far as it rests on the mention of a 'College' by Hamilton and Lockyer is entirely destroyed.

Next as regards the probability that the first part of 'Madraspatanam' is "of Mahomedan origin." Sir Henry Yule does not mention the date of the maps in which Madraspatanam is shown "as the Mahomedan "settlement corresponding to the present Triplicane and Royapettah;" but in Fryer's map, which represents the fort as he saw it in 1672, the name "Madirass"—to which is added "The Indian Town with flat houses"—is entered as the designation of the collection of houses on the north side of the English town, and the text makes it evident that in the year in question the name of Madras was applied chiefly to the crowded collection of houses styled in turn the 'Heathen,' the 'Malabar' [cf. Madras Selections, 4th series, p. 69, note 76], and the 'Black,' town. This consideration does not necessarily disprove the supposed Musulman origin of 'Madras,' but it undoubtedly weakens the chain of Yule's argument.

The idea that "the Governor's house" of Fryer's map may itself have been the 'madrasa' may lastly be noticed. Sir Henry Yule obviously did not mean to do more than suggest this as a bare possibility. If the identity of the buildings could be established, the case for the derivation from 'madrasa' would certainly be greatly strengthened. But there is not a shred of evidence on the subject. Even if the style of architecture, as gathered from the plate in Fryer, may be regarded as proving that Musulmans built the house, it does not follow that it was built before 1639-40, or that if it was so built, it was a 'madrasa.' The drawing however appears to be conventional in some respects and may not give a very exact likeness of the building. It is noteworthy that the same style of architecture appears in the centre guard-house on the west. Whether 'the Governor's house' was a 'madrasa' at one time or not, it at any rate does not appear that it was commonly known as the 'College.' In the consultations of 1st November 1677 [N. and E., Vol. I, p. 53], it was resolved "to make certain repairs to the House in the Fort," which was "in a dangerous state of disrepair," pending receipt of the Company's permission to pull it down and build a new one. A similar description of the building is to be found in a report by a commission of survey which sat in January 1679 [N. and E., Vol. II, p. 4]. There seems to be good reason for supposing that the house in question was that delineated by Fryer.

On the whole it is not unfair to say that the chief argument in favour of the derivation adopted by Sir Henry Yule is of a negative kind. There are fatal objections to whatever other derivations have been suggested, but if the mongrel character of the compound 'Madrasapatanam' is disregarded there is no fatal objection to the derivation from 'madrasa.' Such mongrel compounds are not unknown in Indian nomenclature.

If, however, that derivation is to stand, it must not rest on such accidental coincidences as the use of the word 'College' by writers whose knowledge of Madras was derived from visits made from thirty years to half a century after the foundation of the factory. Portuguese manuscripts of the earlier part of the seventeenth century may possibly throw some light on the subject.

³⁴ [page 49]. Interloping Alley.—A famous interloper, captain of the Expectation and afterwards of the Lumley Castle. In the diary of William Hedges it is related how Alley visited the faujdâr of Hoogley "in a splendid equipage, habitted in scarlet richly laced"—ten Englishmen in "Blew Capps and Coats edged with Red, all armed with Blunderbusses". . . . before his palankeen, 80 Peons before them, and 4 "Musicians playing on the Weights, with two flags before him": just, adds Hedges resentfully, "like an Agent." [Hakl. Soc., Vol. LXXIV, p. 123].

³⁵ [page 49]. John Stables.—cf. Madras Selections, 4th series, p. 76, note 95. Stables held the office of secretary to the council of Fort St. George when in August 1684 William Gyfford came up to the Hoogley factory to take the place of Hedges [Hakl. Soc., Vol. LXXIV, p. 156]. He afterwards became chief at Vizagapatam and met his death there in 1689 when the English were expelled from that factory [cf. note 44, infra].

³⁶ [page 52]. Vincent Sayon.—Came out as a writer 24th June 1672, became a factor in 1677, and at the time of his death was the accomptant [cf. Madras Selections, 4th series, p. 28] at Masulipatam.

³⁷ [page 52]. Robert Hedges.—Nephew of Sir William Hedges and son of Robert Hedges of Burras, Queen's Co. His nomination as factor dates from 5th October 1681. He served at Dacca and Malda, and was a companion of his uncle on his homeward voyage by way of Scanderoon and Marseilles. [Hakl. Soc., Vol. LXXV, p. cxvii]. At the time of his death (28th December 1717) Robert Hedges was president in Bengal. Sir Henry Yule gives an extract from a letter from the court to Fort St. George, dated 8th February 1681, in which they state that they had intended Robert Hedges to reside under the Madras agency, but "upon the desire" of agent Hedges to have "the breeding of him under his Eye," had appointed him "to go down into the Bay" [ibid.]. It appears from the consultations of 10th August 1682, that the nomination in the text was made before the receipt of these orders from the court.

name of the oil of the Sesamum Indicum, pretty certain. In the passage in the text, however, and in the register of passes for vessels bound for certain places, on page 47 of N. and E., Vol. III, there is possibly a reference to some particular factory on the "Gingerly" Coast.

⁴⁰ [page 69]. Titticorin [Tātukkudi].—cf. Hobson-Jobson, s.v., at page 721 and Caldwell's History of Tinnevely at page 75 for conjectural derivations. The final n in the word in the text and in the modern Tuticorin has been added for euphony. The last possession of the Portuguese on the Coramandel coast, Tuticorin was stormed by the Dutch in 1658. Twice taken by the English, in 1782 and 1795, it was twice restored to the Dutch, in 1785 and 1818,—to be finally ceded to England in 1825.

⁵³ [page 78]. St. Thoma river.—Now known as the Adyar.
